Tariff and Wages.
How Short a Platform?
The Power of Song.
Who Was Wrong? No Matter.

— By ARTHUR BRISBANE —

(Copyright, 1928.)

GOV. SMITH is said by his friends to oppose any free trade plank in the Democratic platform.

Governor of a state, with 6,000,000 inhabitants in one city, the Governor knows the connection between high tariff and high wages. And he knows that an ounce of fact is worth many tons of theory—when the theory is inaccurate.

MRS. BLAIR, Democratic vice chairman, demands a platform "So short that people will read it."

That is impossible, if she means THE PEOPLE. You could not write a platform in one column—no room for statesmen to turn around. Yet 80 in 100 will not finish a column.

THE Democrats might write "WE promised to do our best," and then stop. That would be read and applauded. But such satisfying brevity is not in nature.

BIRDS sang, small mammals squeaked melodiously and men, probably, whistled to attract their ladies before there was any speech. Therefore, song, deeply planted in the brain, is more powerful than prose, and at Roanoke, Va., the political boss, fearing a local stampede to Smith, told the band it must not play "The Sidewalks of New York."

WHY the words "Me and Mamie O'Rourke, we tripped the light fantastics on the Sidewalks of New York" should stampede a convention is not clear. But they might. "Yankee Doodle" has words even sillier. Think how that song stirs men when fifes play it.

GERMANS thresh over the war question "who was guilty?"

The side that LOSES is guilty, always. Had the Germans won, which was impossible with their Kaiser, they would not bother discussing guilt. Victory would make it unnecessary.

THE French, stabilizing their franc at 25.52 to the dollar, realize that it does not much matter who is right or wrong, or who wins, as regards real results.

The man that owned $100 in French money, before the war, now owns $20. Every owner of pre-war French bonds has been eight cents out from each dollar. And that, after WINNING the war.

WAR does not pay, right or wrong, winner or loser. Another war would destroy our civilization, such as it is.

If men of power got those facts fixed in their minds war would stop. The would-be war maker would be treated like a mad dog, as he should be. Meanwhile, we should keep prepared, for you never can tell.

LLOYD GEORGE says that youth disillusioned by the war, turns from religion and the church.

Youth has done that often, old age occasionally. But youth and age return to religion. Illusion or faith, whichever you call it, is a necessity to 999 in 1,000.

Men ask themselves difficult questions and worry when there is no answer. Faith answers everything.

VOLTAIRE'S saying, "If there had been no God, it would have been necessary to invent one," describes human beings.

You may dissect the atom and the atom's electrons and nuclei. You may show how a dozen radioactive transformations produce lead from other elements.

Still men will ask, "who made the atoms and the big guns? How did it all start? What keeps it going and whence did it come?"

THE roulette wheel goes round at Monte Carlo. The ivory ball spins, finally settling into its place—red, black, odd, even, passe or manque, or zero.

And so men, spun by an invisible hand, fall into their places in this life.

SOON politicians will be solemnly addressing thousands of young "first voters." The young voters will listen, not hearing, and drop into the Republican or Democratic column, in accordance with the environment and teaching. How many in a thousand will vote, knowing WHY?

5 RALLIES END BOND DRIVE

The crux of Allegheny county's most extensive campaign to promote a bond issue will be brought to a close tonight with five mass meetings in different parts of the county.

"Vote for every one of the seven questions contained in the peoples' $43,680,000 bond issue,'" will be the keynote of addresses closing the drive.

James C. Chaplin, president of the Peoples' Bond Issue Association of Allegheny County, in a statement made a final appeal to electors in the county to vote tomorrow for the issue in its entirety.

"Every elector who has any civic pride or who believes in progress and prosperity, should vote 'Yes' to every one of the seven questions,' Mr. Chaplin said. "Public improvements promote progress. If this county is to go forward the bond issue must not be defeated."

Polls will open at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, daylight saving time, and will close 8 p. m., daylight saving time.

The meetings tonight will be held before members of the West View Board of Trade, Penn Town-

Nobile Safe, Plane Tilts

Associated Press.

Spurred by the rescue of Gen. Nobile, the international group of airplanes and ships in Spitzbergen waters bent every effort today to rescue the remaining stranded men.

Swedish fliers on the vessel, Quest, at Cape Henlopen, were ready to fly to the Nobile camp again, particularly to rescue Lieut. Lundborg, Swedish flier whose plane overturned on his second trip to the camp. Unconfirmed dispatches reported that the Russian ice breaker, Krassin, was in communication with Roald Amundsen and the five men of the French seaplane which disappeared a week ago while flying to Nobile's aid.

The base ship, Citta di Milano, has left Kings Bay for Virgo Bay to be closer to the scene of the rescue work. Gen. Nobile, whose leg was injured, is aboard her.

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 25.—Saved from a lingering death in the grim, white wastes of the Arctic by an heroic air rescue which will go down in history as one of the most masterly achievements of aviation, Gen. Umberto Nobile and a member of the Italia's crew believed to be Troiani, an engineer, were aboard the Citta de Milano today under the care of the ship's surgeon.

Both Nobile and Troiani are believed to be seriously injured. The engineer was injured when the Italia crashed to the ice on the morning of May 25. Nobile is suffering from a crushed leg. Just

Stewart Indicted

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Robert W. Stewart, head of the Indiana Standard Oil Company, was indicted on three counts of perjury today as the result of his Continental Trading Company testimony before the Senate Oil Committee.

It was the same testimony that caused John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to demand his resignation as chairman of the corporation's board of directors.

Return of the indictment was followed by charges of Stewart's counsel that it represented "the last word in the outrageous abuse of court processes for political purposes" in a "vindictive attempt to overcome" his acquittal 12 days ago on a charge of refusing to answer questions asked by the committee. Stewart, they said, would seek immediate trial, confident of acquittal.

"DRY" PASTOR DENIES SHIFTING

The following letter was received Saturday by the Sun-Telegraph from the Rev. G. L. Powell, pastor of McMaster's Methodist Episcopal Church, Turtle Creek, who, on Friday, sat as an observer on the Morals Court bench with Magistrate A. D. Brandon:

Editor Sun-Telegraph:

Just a word or two about the "twist" your reporter gave to certain bits of conversation between Magistrate Brandon and the writer, yesterday morning.

Rev. G. L. Powell.

Two reporters asked me for a statement. I replied: "I have no statement to make now, but may do so later." advantage was taken of certain words and made to suit the occasion and the interpretation to fit into the "tiff" Mr. Braidon and I had at the Ministerial Association on Monday morning, June 4.

1. Much was made of my statement: "I've changed my mind." Indeed, I have, regarding Mr. Brandon personally and his court. When he made his defense before the association, and I had observed his emotional complex, I was under the impression he was "camouflaging." Now I believe he was sincere. I had imagined his court as dignified and decorus, but such features were decidedly absent. Hence "I've changed my mind."

2. At the adjourned meeting of the Ministerial Association on Monday morning, the 18th inst., the paragraph in the resolution presented by me, by request, condemning Mr. Brandon, was eliminated by the Temperance Committee, and new resolutions unanimously adopted with no mention of his name. "A change of mind."

3. Morals Court does not seem to have competent jurisdiction to try "violations of the prohibition law." Those who plead guilty to moonshining have to be bound over to a higher court. Mr. Brandon's hands are tied.

4. Mr. Brandon is a victim of the limitations of his court. He is absolutely powerless.

5. But, I would be a most profound fool to pronounce "prohibition a failure" on what I saw and heard in Morals Court. That is a misrepresentation and absolutely false, as far as I am concerned.

6. I still maintain Magistrate Brandon made the mistake in defending himself before the Ministerial Association on June 4 of saddling on the prohibition law what should be saddled on the authorities sworn to enforce the law. Mr. Brandon is not an authority, except in a very, very limited sense. We have to look "higher up." His logic limps. I blame him for joining the anti-prohibition hallelujah chorus!

7. The effect upon the writer of this whole issue is: I believe in prohibition more than ever. I hate the liquor business more than ever. I believe, more than ever, the prohibition law can be enforced, when the authorities do their duty. I will fight the liquor evil with my voice and pen more than ever!

BALK AT STRADDLE PLAN

By WILLIAM I. GRUNDISH,
Staff Correspondent.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 25.—Dissatisfaction with the apparent decision of Democratic leaders to include only an innocuous and meaningless prohibition plank in the platform was expressed today by members of the Pennsylvania delegation.

This dissatisfaction came entirely from some of the state's supporters of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, who were emphatic in expressing their belief that the party should take to the people a modification plank.

PITTSBURGHERS WET

"The Democratic party will lose a great opportunity if it does not express its belief that the present prohibition law should be modified in such a way that it can be enforced," said Henry Hornbostel, Pittsburgh architect and delegate from the Thirty-fourth District. "The present law cannot be enforced either in Pennsylvania or in Texas."

John A. McSparran, former master of the State Grange and leader of the few anti-Smith delegates from the state, expressed the opinion that the prohibition plank was not nearly so important as the question of whether the nominee is "wet" or "dry."

"You will find that Gov. Al Smith and his friends will not care very much what the platform is, just so they can get him nominated," he went on. "The wets want a wet candidate and they have him in Al Smith. The drys want a dry candidate. They are not worrying over the exact wording of the prohibition plank in the platform. The nomination of Al Smith will mean the defeat of the party at the polls."

McSparran, who claims 18 anti-Smith votes out of 76 in the delegation, said his first choice for President is Gov. Dan Moody of Texas, and his second is Representative Cordell Hull, Tennessee. Asked whether he would support Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, who this morning appears to be still

OLGA PAWLISHAK

ROSE BARTOLETTI

"Not guilty!" spoke Olga Pawlishak, 17, and Rose Bartoletti, 35, in Criminal Court today. Both are charged with murder. Olga, the prosecutor accuses, shot Mike Anderson, Ambridge, when he persisted in courting her mother in their Fair Oaks home. Rose is named as the slayer of Simone Lagatutta, 538 Becks Run road, who married on his death bed the so-called "other woman."

GIRL, 17, AND WOMAN DENY MURDERS

Criminal Court trials today spelled coincidence—two women confronted by murder charges. One, 35, is accused of shooting an unfaithful sweetheart; the other, 17, denies she riddled with lead the man who courted her mother.

Pretty Olga Pawlishak, 17, of Fair Oaks, stood uncertainly before Visiting Judge A. B. Smith and in a thin, barely audible voice, spoke: "Not guilty." Olga's sweetheart, Mike Popowich, 20, says she fired the shots that killed Mike Anderson, 38, of Ambridge, in Olga's home. Popowich also faces the murder charge.

Popowich's change of face has confused the case. After pleading guilty last week, changed his story; Olga, he alleged, had fired those shots, not he. The court has not yet ruled on his case.

They picked juries today to try both Olga and Rose Bartolette, the other woman defendant, also known as Rose Scarpo, of 538 Becks Run road.

Rose pleaded not guilty to killing Simone Lagatutta, 39, who married, on his death bed, the so-called "other woman," Pauline Costanza, 18. Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk charged that Rose had pulled the trigger when she learned that Lagattuta had shared his attentions with another.

The appearance of Miss Pawlishak has changed greatly since her arrest. Olga has the look of a woman of 45 about her face with dark rings under her eyes and a set expression.

Even her hair, then in long yellow curls, seems to have caught the spirit of the dark iron-barred jail. It is a dull chestnut brown, parted on the side and in a grown-up figure eight on the back of her head.

She wore a dark blue georgette dress with lace trimming on the sleeves and neck, and black stockings and patent leather pumps. Only once has she broken and that was when she tried to say "not guilty." The words seemed to stick in her throat. She knew it meant her fiance, Mike, would have a greater fight. Olga, until last week, maintained she did the killing.

Rose Bartolletti wiped her eyes almost constantly with a black lace bordered handkerchief. Mrs. Bartolletti was smartly dressed in a long blue serge coat, hiding her gown, and a black satin hat.

AUTO INJURES GIRL ON WAY TO SCHOOL

En route to East Park school today, Adose Gunsberg, 10, of 605 Lockhart street, was run down in Lockhart street by an auto driven by Richard J. Jahn, 4922 Kincaid street. Bruised about the head and body, the girl was taken to Allegheny General Hospital. Jahn was charged with reckless driving.

Dance Past 349th Hr. Mark

Two local marathon dances, which have been pyramiding hours despite Sunday blue laws, were back on their home ground today. Three Negro couples who had run their string of 349 hours at 2 p. m. today, for a local record, were back at Motor Square Garden after spending Sunday at a private residence.

The Duquesne Garden contingent, with 10 couples chalking up 283 hours at 2 o'clock this afternoon, spent Sunday on the Japanese Garden, pleasure craft, which was moored in the Monongahela River.

Four years of wedded life will be celebrated at 9 o'clock tonight by Clara and Rufus McCraw, of Winslow street, dancers at Motor Square Garden. When Promoter Alexis Ardolino learned that today is the fourth anniversary of their marriage he ordered a huge wedding cake and arranged for a party.

The McCraws form one of the three couples who have helped make a new local marathon dance record by shuffling into the fifteenth day.

The Motor Square hoofers got back to their home floor at 1 o'clock this morning. While no information was divulged at the box office as to where Sunday was spent, it is said that the three couples, trainers, judges and promoters spent Sunday in a house in Lowell street, where the hoofers kept time to the music ground out by a phonograph.

One couple, Loretta Amato, 545 Indiana way, and Jack Gibson, 642 Chianti street, quit the Duquesne Garden grind Sunday morning on the boat, leaving 10 couples to be transported back to the Oakland floor at 1:45 this morning.

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 25.—Eight couples survived two 30-mile truck rides to run their string of consecutive hours of dancing to 177 at 10 o'clock this morning.

MACHINES AID STRAW VOTE

Voting machines, through which citizens may indicate secretly, swiftly and simply their choice for the presidency as between Hoover and Smith, were set up today by The Sun-Telegraph in the lobbies of the William Penn, Fort Pitt and Roosevelt hotels, the Jenkins Arcade and The Sun-Tele want ad corner at Fifth avenue and Market street.

With these devices the scope of the straw vote will be extended, it is believed, and thousands of voters induced to register their preference who would hesitate to fill in paper ballots. The Sun-Telegraph's presidential poll thus becomes the most comprehensive ever attempted here.

SMITH OPPOSITION READY TO COLLAPSE

FOES FEAR GOVERNOR WILL WIN ON FIRST

By GEORGE R. HOLMES.
International News Service.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 25.—The desperately struggling anti-Smith leaders in the Democratic National Convention conducted a new count of noses today, 24 hours before the gavel falls, and then gave up all hope of stopping the New York Governor.

A number of conferences were followed by a morning of figuring, and in no direction could the bitter-enders find any hope of holding off Gov. Smith's nomination beyond the third ballot. He may even go over on the first ballot, although his managers do not claim it nor particularly desire it.

SMITH SEEMS SURE

The cold figures, checked and rechecked by the weary and dejected opponents of Smith, showed that unless the day of political miracles is past, Gov. Smith will have a minimum of 750 votes on the second ballot. His possible maximum is considerably greater because in that figure of 750 there Smith had been accorded only 42 votes from the so-called solid South, the Arkansas and Louisiana delegations and four from North Carolina.

As the great mass of delegates poured into Houston today by train, boat and motor there were rumblings that indicated Smith may get a good many scattering votes from Southern states that his managers have regarded as unfriendly territory. Six of Virginia's 24 votes, for example, were reported ready to go to Smith on the first ballot, or whenever the Governor's managers want them called in. Eighteen of Indiana's 30 were said to be ready to go for Smith as soon as released by Evans Woollen, the Hoosier favorite son.

The road seemed to be opening up for a band-wagon movement that threatens to sweep everything in front of it, just as at Kansas City, where the Hoover band wagon could hardly provide space for all who wished to clamber on.

"FOUR HORSEMEN"

Only Senator Jim Reed, of Missouri; Gov. Dan Moody, of Texas; Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, and Dan Roper, of North Carolina, were left this morning to carry on the fight against the seeming inevitability of it all. They constituted themselves the four horsemen of the anti-Smith movement, but they admittedly were making little headway. Figure as they would, they could not see more than a maximum of 270 votes that could be counted on to oppose Smith after the first ballot. And that figure is generous by perhaps 70 votes, according to a careful calculation.

The fight against the nomination of the New York Governor was in a state of utter collapse this afternoon. There remained only the hope of jettisoning the Smith craft in the platform committee through the adoption of a dry plank so radical that Smith might refuse to run on it. But this, too, appeared a forlorn hope for, as the Smith managers quickly pointed out, if two-thirds of the convention is for Smith it is reasonable to expect that a majority of the resolutions committee will also be friendly to his wishes in building the platform structure.

Sen. Gooding, Coal Strike Probe Leader, Dies

LED QUIZ IN W. PA. FIELDS

GOODING, Idaho, June 25.—(AP.)—Death has terminated the second term of Senaor Frank R. Gooding.

The junior Republican senator rom Idaho died yesterday at the ome of his daughter in the little own he founded and which bears is name. He came here to rest after an operation, the forepart of this month. He had not been in the best of health since contracting influenza at Washington, December last. Death was attributed to cancer of the intestines.

Senator Gooding started his political career as governor of this state during the turbulent days when "Big Bill" Haywood was on trial charged with implication in the slaying of Gov. Frank Steulenberg. Following two terms as governor, he returned to active direction of his sheep business.

In 1918, Mr. Gooding again became a candidate for public office and was defeated for the Senate by John F. Nugent. Entering the race again in 1920, he was successful, and since his election to the Senate centered his attention on freight rate surveys and was instrumental in drafting several rate bills. He also was chairman of the special Senate committee assigned to investigate living conditions in the Eastern coal fields last winter.

Senator Frank R. Gooding, of Idaho, who died yesterday, was much interested in Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania, particularly in the coal industry.

He was chairman of the special [illegible] al committee which investigated conditions in the coal fields here and was largely responsible for the sweeping Senate probe which climaxed his committee's investigation.

As chairman of the coal investigation committee he displayed an unusually acute interest in problems facing the operator and miner in the time he spent visiting mines in the strike-torn districts of Western Pennsylvania.

A number of times during his investigation, Senator Gooding expressed himself as "amazed" at the status of the coal industry, and characterized the deplorable living and working conditions as "un-American." He was much distressed over living conditions among Negroes in some of the non-union mines and he did not hesitate about telling coal operators in this district what he thought.

Despite his age, (he was almost 70) Senator Gooding was tireless in his efforts to get at the bottom of the coal trouble. After driving miles back into the coal country and tramping around mining camps, standing in cramped offices, barracks or coal shanties for hours hearing the miners and the operators tell their sides of the controversy, Senator Gooding would return to his hotel late at night to hear other groups. Day after day he kept up his strenuous program until the end of the investigation here, when he was forced to return to Washington and rest for a few days before undertaking to make his report to the Senate.

PROBE HEAD DIES

FRANK R. GOODING

Senator Frank R. Gooding, chairman of the Senate sub-committee in the investigation of mining conditions in the Pittsburgh fields this spring, has died in his Gooding (Idaho) home at the age of 67. He suffered a relapse after a stomach operation.

STRADDLE PLAN OPPOSED

leading the field against Smith, McSparran said:

"I won't support any wet and Reed is a wet. Reed would be a better candidate than Smith, however. He is not tainted by Tammany, which really is a Republican organization as far as national elections are concerned and should not come to a Democratic convention demanding that its candidate be nominated."

McSparran's claim to 18 of the 76 votes was laughed at by National Committeeman Joseph F. Guffey of Pittsburgh, who said that 69½ would support Smith.

"I look for the nomination of Gov. Smith on the first ballot tomorrow," he predicted before the state's delegation met in caucus today. It is likely that the real figure lines somewhere between the two estimates and will not be known exactly until the delegation is polled.

McSparran's statement concerning the wetness of Reed, of Missouri, came in spite of the latter's first formal statement since his arrival here, which almost unanimously is regarded as an overture to the dry delegations from the southern states. His statement on prohibition lacked entirely his usual directness and vigor and is almost vague enough to be a plank in any platform.

"The Constitution and the statutes must stand and be obeyed unless they are changed or repealed in the manner and form laid down by the Constitution," he said. "There should be no evasions. There should be no attempts to accomplish their destruction by indirection. In my opinion, the eighteenth amendment will stand until and unless the moral forces of the nation become convinced that there is some better way to deal with the liquor problem."

REED FORCES HOPEFUL

The Reed forces still are hopeful of getting the support of the coalition of anti-Smith leaders. But this coalition seemed to be getting further and further from a solution. Like the anti-Hoover bloc, it has been unable to agree upon a candidate. Its sole hope is to block Smith until his forces, some of whom are not overly enthusiastic, waver. It is doubtful if such tactics can succeed. If Reed would declare for Smith, or step from the picture, the nomination of the New York governor apparently would be assured.

One of Al Smith's greatest allies here is the heat. Delegates unaccustomed to June weather in Southern Texas are anxious to get the convention over with as soon as possible. Because of the breeze from the gulf the nights are fairly cool—if one is lucky enough to draw as a prize in the grand scramble for quarters a room with the proper exposure. But only one visitor in a hundred has such a room. In addition to the heat there are mosquitoes and Texas "chiggers," as one local newspaper admitted when it published a cure for the pest on its editorial page. Your correspondent can testify to the mosquitoes.

GOUGERS BUSY

The city is jammed. Hotel rates have soared skyward. One nice room with the proper exposure which would rent for possibly $8 at an expensive Eastern hotel is costing $24 a day. Another room in a smaller hotel which could not be rented for more than $2 in Pittsburgh is costing $8 a day. Pressure on the part of local politicians was needed to stop the skyward trend of taxicab rates, exorbitant to start with.

The Pennsylvania delegation arrived yesterday morning and was met by a committee of former residents of the state and a band. The caucus will be held today.

manager of the Fort Pitt, and L. Fred Klooz, manager of the Roosevelt, co-operated in the project. Interest in the machines and in the straw vote was quickly aroused, and many persons hastened to record their choice.

The machines will be installed in office building corridors, railroad stations and other places where the public congregate, and the poll continued until sentiment has been thoroughly sounded and a good indication obtained of how the people of this district will vote.

VOTE ON TWO QUESTIONS

Each of the machines, which will continue to be located in prominent public places for a considerable time, will be in charge of a young lady, who will instruct the voter in the simple rudiments of voting by machine. There are two questions for each voter.

Whom shall he vote for, Hoover or Smith, for President? And whom did he vote for at the last presidential election, Coolidge or Davis?

A straw vote canvass of various sections of the city, conducted by representatives of The Sun-Telegraph during the past two weeks has indicated a more than usual interest in the present presidential election. Scarcely a man or woman was approached who did not show a lively concern over the question, countless people who never voted before in Pittsburgh planning to vote for their favorite candidate this year, and concerted efforts are shown by entire groups of individuals to boost their favorite nominees for the high office.

OPEN TO PUBLIC

The voting machines procured by The Sun-Telegraph have been displayed in Pittsburgh schools and before clubs and civic organizations, but this is the first time they have been thrown open for the use of the general public. It is planned to have these machines adopted for general election purposes and the public will vote on their use at the coming fall election.

At a meeting in Millvale Burgess E. B. W. Pfischner promised that a house-to-house canvass would be made tomorrow "to bring out the vote."

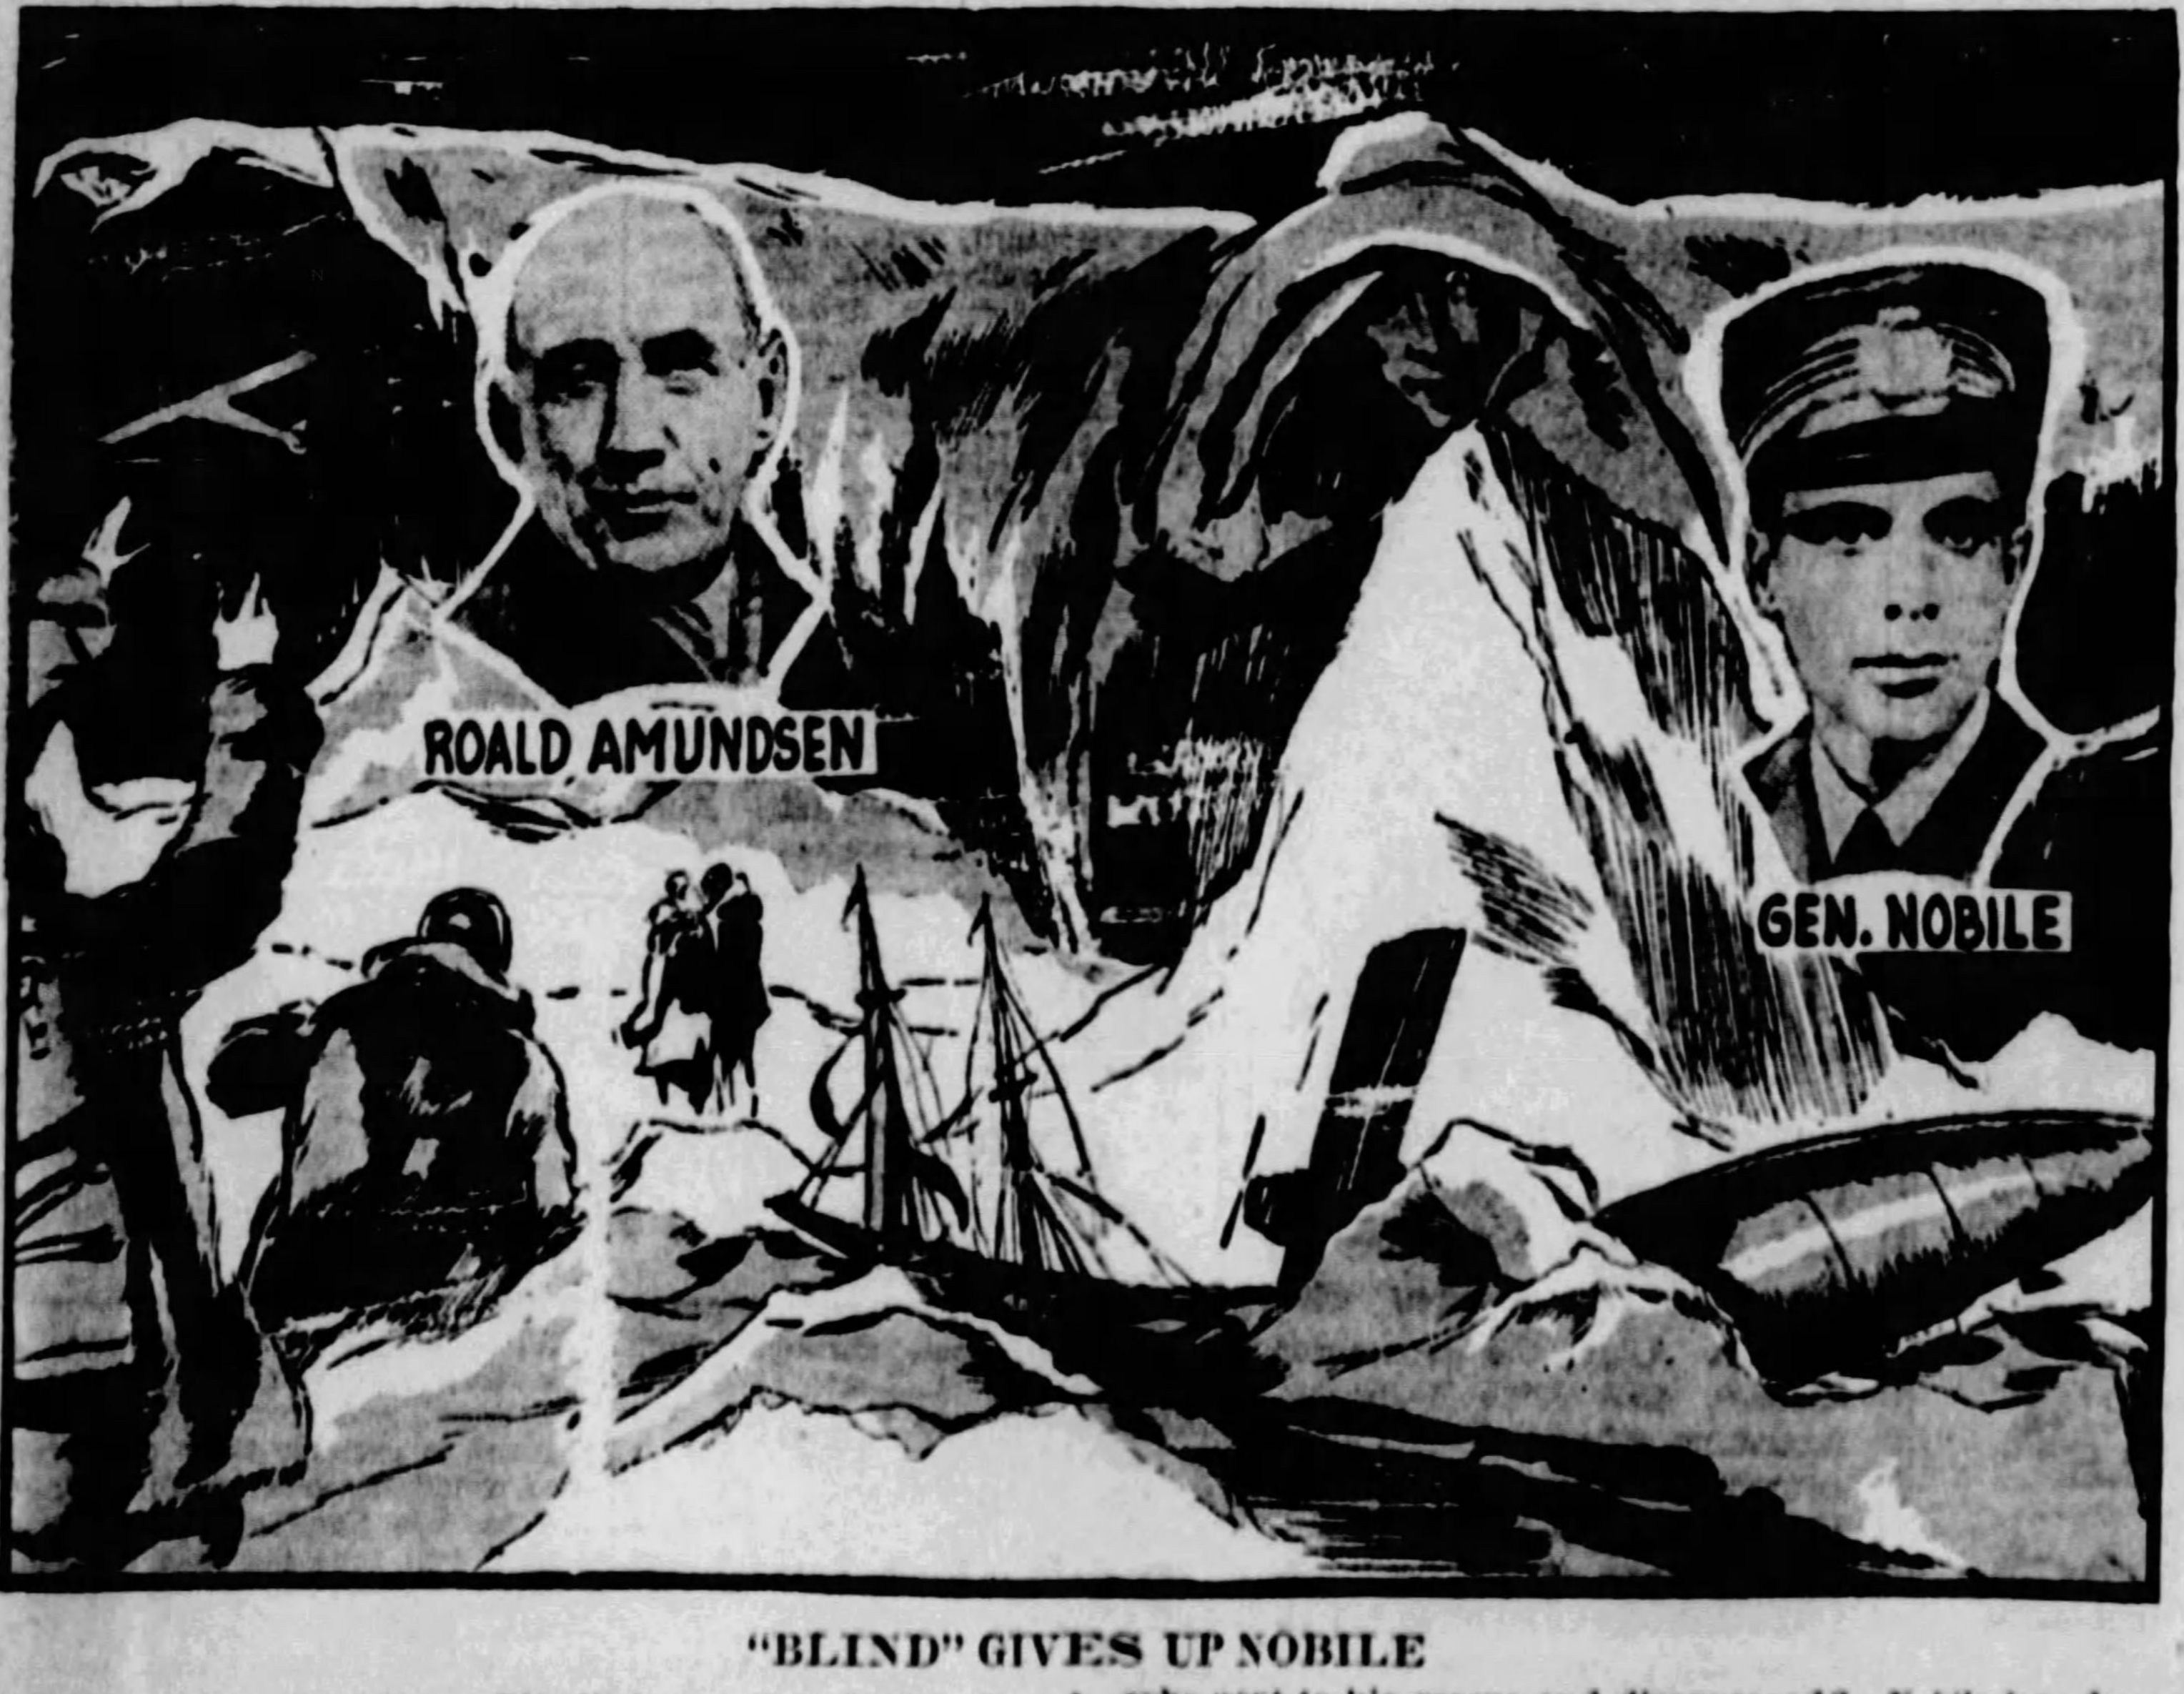
The $43,680,000 investment has been indorsed by business and civic organizations galore.

The issue, as the voters will see it on the ballot, is divided into seven classifications: Road improvements, $6,550,000; boulevards (Moss Side, Saw Mill Run, Ohio River, Allegheny River boulevards), $10,930,000; park improvements, $1,500,000; bridges (McKees Rocks-Ohio River, West End-North Side, South Tenth Street, Boston and 29 minor highway bridges), $14,650,000; county office building, $2,550,000; town hall, $6,000,000; airport, $1,500,000.

PROTEST VOICED

Protests against the bond issue have come from Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, of the League of Women Voters, whose attack brought a prompt answer from civic leaders, and from Commissioner Charles C. McGovern. While McGovern's colleagues, Commissioners E. V. Babcock and Joseph G. Armstrong, have strongly supported the program, McGovern issued a lengthy statement today suggesting that the right time to ask the taxpayers for the money was after the current audit had shown the county's financial condition.

WILL ARCTIC NOW RETURN ADMUNDSEN



"BLIND" GIVES UP NOBILE

Now that the "Great Blind" has returned Gen. Umberto Nobile, what has happened to Roald Admundsen, who went to his rescue and disappeared? Nobile has been "brought back" by Sweden's airplane, Upland, and was injured the day before his rescue.

RESCUE PLANE UPSETS

how he received his injuries has not been revealed.

The marooned men were rescued by the Swedish aviator, Capt. Tornberg, flying the tri-motored Junkers plane Upland.

Spurred on by urgent requests from Nobile that the ice was cracking up under his crew, Tornberg equipped his plane with skis and headed for the encampment of the castaways.

He landed on a moving block of ice, took Nobile and the engineer aboard and flew to the steamer Quest, hovering off the Henlopen Straits. The injured men were given first aid treatment aboard the Quest before another plane took them to the Citta di Milano, which is in the vicinity of Dane's Island.

Of the 10 missing members of the Italia's crew, three, the Italian Navy commanders, Zappi and Mariano, and the Swedish professor, Malgren, left Nobile's party almost a month ago to trek over the ice for aid. The other seven were swept aloft with the gas bag of the Italia when the dirigible crashed, and were separated from Nobile.

The Norwegian steamer Arrita, which arrived here from Tromsoe yesterday, brought a slight ray of hope for the safety of Amundsen. The ship's operator reported picking up an SOS message which might have been from the lost explorer. The message was similar to that reported picked up by the Soviet ice-breaker Maligin,

CAR DROPS OFF BRIDGE

IOLA, Kas., June 25.—(AP.)—Forty persons were injured, five of them dangerously, when three cars of the "Southerner," fast Missouri Pacific passenger train, bound from New Orleans to Kansas City, was derailed near Durand, Kas., 16 miles west of here, at 4 a. m. today.

Twenty-six injured were brought to St. John's Hospital here. Fourteen others were able to continue their trip.

A broken rail was believed to have caused the wreck. Several hundred feet of track was torn up.

Most of the injured were in a steel chair car which plunged 20 feet from the Owl Creek Bridge and lodged between the banks of the stream, above the water. Two steel Pullman cars were overturned.

Missouri Pacific physicians and nurses were rushed to the scene from Coffeyville, divisional headquarters, and wrecking crews went from Coffeyville and Osawatomie.

WEDS SONS' CHUM

Mrs. Lillian Parker Allen, 51, Berkeley (Cal.) clubwoman, has many times been the hostess for John W. Bogle, 26, artist and writer, when he visited her home as the guest of her two sons. And suddenly, the two fled over the state line to Reno, Nev., and were married. Mrs. Allen, almost twice as old as her groom, is a grandmother in her own right.

Wife Dies in Fire

SEEK CHIEF IN LOTTERY

Additional arrests in the school lottery case loomed today when Lieut. Charles Cahill and two plainclothesmen of the Center Avenue Police Station set out to interview boys who have been selling the gambling tickets to children in the Hill district.

In the Franklin school, Principal W. A. Laning disclosed, "perhaps 10 or 15 boys"—he was uncertain about the number—were caught selling the lottery slips, based on the New York Clearing House figures, to their schoolmates. But the lottery has been stamped out there, Laning declared, the boys having been "scared" into promising to sell no more tickets. The principal said he did not know for whom the boys were working. Cahill said he intended to find out.

Ray L. Huff, principal of the Moorhead school, said there had been no selling of the tickets in the school itself, but that they were handled in the neighborhood. One child bought a ticket for two cents on being told it offered a chance to win $10.

Miss Mary Erskine, principal of the Rose school, said the only evidence she had been able to find of the operation of the lottery was a report that a boy who graduated from the school two years ago and now attends high school was selling them.

Defendants already under arrest in the lottery case, including the four arrested Saturday, will be given a hearing before Magistrate John J. Verona at No. 2 Police Station tomorrow.

'T Isn't Lindy!

WILLIAM HESKET

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, landing unexpectedly at Moundsville, W. Va., received an ovation, a thundering ovation. It required time and patience to convince the excited crowd that the plane's passenger was William Hesket, only 15, St. Clairsville (Ohio) high school boy.

She'll Compete

ALICE MATTHEWS

Alice Ruth Matthews is going to compete in August in the Conneaut Lake beauty pageant, which will have entrants from all sections of this state, as "Miss Brookville, Pa." She was selected, of course, as the prettiest local girl by her fellow townsmen.

3 OTHERS ESCAPE

Trapped in the kitchen of her home yesterday, Mrs. Rose M. Klouse, 45, of Glenshaw, Indiana township, was burned to death. Her husband, John A. Klouse was burned when he attempted to rescue her. The woman is thought to have been overcome by smoke after shouting a warning to her husband, a daughter, Rita, 10, and to her father-in-law, John A. Klouse, Sr.

The wife was preparing breakfast in the kitchen when the fire started. She warned the other occupants of the house and they ran to safety, fleeing through the front door. The husband believed the wife had escaped through the rear door and when he ran around the house to join her, he discovered she was still in the house. He made several attempts to climb into the kitchen but was forced back by intense heat.

SENATE PARTY LOSSES EVEN

WASHINGTON, June 25.—(AP.)—With the death of Senator Gooding yesterday at Gooding, Ida., the Senate, during this year, has lost four members from its ranks.

The Republican side lost two, including Gooding and Senator Willis of Ohio, and the Democrats also two, Senators Jones of New Mexico, and Ferris of Michigan.

HE SHOULD BE A FRIEND OF YOURS

Wouldn't you like to drive to the office in the morning and speak thusly to your favorite "traffic cop" when he beams upon you—as though nothing ever happened to make him angry!—passing: "Good morning, Officer Rafferty"—or else, yell "Hi, Teddy!" Well, the Sun-Tele's series, "Traffic Cops," will tell you how. This fellow today, fr' instance, is to be found on the North Side, but don't spend the day hunting for him when The Sun-Tele'll tell you his name tomorrow.

SATURDAY'S "TRAFFIC COP" was P. T. WALSH, 3406 FIFTH AVENUE, WHO'S THE BOSS OF THINGS TRAFFIC WHERE THE POINT AND MANCHESTER BRIDGES GET CHUMMY. HE'S A-TAKIN' OF DAN McGREAVEY'S PLACE NOW, BECAUSE DAN'S ILL.

QUIET OMINOUS, ROGERS THINKS

By WILL ROGERS.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 25.—Everything is so quiet, restful and beautiful, you wouldn't think there was a Democrat in a thousand miles. Been here three days, haven't heard a cheer, a band, an argument, or even an echo.

I wouldn't stay for the thing, but I know that a Democrat is just like a baby. If it's hollering and making a lot of noise, there is nothing serious the matter with it, but if it's quiet and still and don't pay much attention to anything, why that's when it's really dangerous.

The Kansas City convention took the life out of this one in more ways than one.

You know you wouldn't feel so good, if someone just had announced to you 10 days ago, that it was Tunney and Dempsey that you were to meet in the finals.

But there is bound to be some comedy coming and here is one reason.

OLD APPLESAUCE

Since prohibition was unearthed nine years ago, there has only been one argument invented that a politician when he is cornered can duck behind, and that is the old applesauce one:

"I am for law enforcement."

It don't mean anything, never meant anything, and never will mean anything.

It would take practically a lunatic to announce: "I am against law enforcement."

Now the Republicans held their convention first, and naturally they grabbed this lone tree to hide behind.

Now that leaves the Democrats out in the open.

If they say anything about prohibition, they either got to say: "It ought to be modified," or "it shouldn't be modified."

They can't duck behind the old "alibi tree:" "I am for law enforcement," for there is only room for one back there, and a Republican is already hiding there.

If I had been the Democrats I would have held my convention first so I could have grabbed that "alibi" first, if I had had to hold it three years ago.

Now naturally the logical thing to do, if it was "legitimate" business, would be to nominate with Smith another wet as Vice President, and also put into the platform a plank on modification, and have the whole prohibition thing out, on a straight issue, and let the voters settle it once and for all.

NOT POLITICS

But politics is not a "legitimate" business, and they won't do it that way.

Why, because they don't know if there is more wet votes, or dry votes. So they are afraid to take a chance.

So they will try to "straddle" the same way the Republicans did. But as there has only been one "straddle" invented in nine years (and the Republicans appropriated that), why it's going to be pretty hard for the boys to think up a substitute in just this one week.

So anything that is done will have an awful good chance of having some comedy attach . For there is only three other things to do, and here they are:

Nominate with Smith, a dry Vice President. Well, there is a sure-fire laugh, for you then have an animal with a wet head and a dry tail.

Now you may salve the drys with a dry Vice President, but up to now no one has ever paid enough attention to one to know if he is pickled or petrified.

UNKNOWN QUANTITY

The next thing they can do is nominate for a Vice President a man that no one knows whether he is wet or dry. In other words, a man that has remained of so little interest to the country that no one has ever taken the trouble to find out.

The third plan is to nominate anybody, either wet or dry as Vice President, and then put in the platform a strictly dry plank. That brings more laughs.

Smith running on a dry platform. That's like turning a whale loose in Death Valley.

So all the boys are up against here is just these few simple problems:

"We want Smith, for he is the only man we got a chance with."

"We wish he was dry instead of wet, but as he is not, we got to make the most of it. We got to dress him up so he will look wet in the cities and dry in the country."

"We got to hold our wets, but for God's sake don't turn them loose on the drys."

A COOLIDGE STRADDLE

It's like I remember Coolidge said one time: "I am for labor, but not against capital." They got to promise the women something pretty dry or they will go to Hoover.

So boy, these babies are studying. Tammany Hall and the cities are their meal ticket, but the women and the W. C. T. U. are the clothing and lodging.

So if these boys are not shouting and singing down here, it's because they not only have a convention on their hands, but a problem. So there is bound to be laughs, and they will be serious and unintentional, which are the best laughs in the world.

Pittsburgh As Others See Us

"The name and fame of Pittsburgh appear to be as well known here (in Yugoslavia) as the reputation of Birmingham, England."

—JOHN D. PRINCE

JOHN D. PRINCE

JOHN D. PRINCE, U. S. Minister to Yugoslavia, was born in New York City, April 17, 1868; educated at Columbia, University of Berlin and Johns Hopkins; dean of the graduate school at Columbia. Served in the New Jersey State Senate and was acting governor of New Jersey in 1912; Minister at Denmark, 1921-26, and is now stationed at Belgrade.

I have pleasure in stating that the name and fame of Pittsburgh appear to be as well known here as the reputation of Birmingham, England. Every person of education with whom I have spoken knows of your great city as one of the most prominent manufacturing centers of the world.

A great number of Yugoslavs—Serbs, Croats and Slovenes—who at one time or another worked in Pittsburgh and have since returned home, have also done much to make your city known to the less educated inhabitants of this country.

I do not think that Pittsburgh needs any artificial advertisement here.

HELD FOR LURING GIRLS

After three girls testified he had asked them to enter an automobile last night in Baum boulevard, Lafayette Massey, 28, Negro, of 4709 Hatfield street, was held for court by Magistrate A. D. Brandon, in Morals Court today.

"Come on and get in the car," the Negro called to them on the sidewalk, according to Dolly Smith, 14, of 4818 Baum boulevard; Dorothy Hilger, 14, of 5115 Liberty avenue, and Flora Wittmer, 15, of 434 Cedarville street.

The Smith girl called her father, R. W. Smith, in front of whose home the Negro had entered a parked car. Smith and John Zeus, of 6840 Upland street, owner of the car, ran out, seized the Negro and held him until police arrived. Massey battled with the police, they testified.

Massey was held on charges of enticing minors, stealing an automobile and possessing burglar tools.

CALL MT. GRETNA CAMP FOR CAPT. HENDERSON

FRANKLIN, Pa., June 25.—Pennsylvania's National Guard camp at Mt. Gretna this year will be named for Capt. James M. Henderson, who as commander of Company D, One Hundred and Twelfth Infantry was killed in action near Chateau Tierry on July 26, 1918. It is the first time an encampment has recognized in name an officer of rank lower than major.

Attorney Marshall Is Ill

Grief over the recent death of his son, is weighing against Rody P. Marshall, attorney, who is seriously ill with pneumonia at his home, 201 Lytton avenue.

The younger Marshall, Rody P., Jr., 18, who suffered a broken vertebrae while diving at Naragansett, L. I., three years ago, died a few months ago. His father, crushed by the tragedy, was stricken several weeks ago and pneumonia developed. Dr. S. H. Ralston, who is attending Attorney Marshall, at noon today said the condition of the patient is serious, but that he probably will recover if no further complications set in.

ONE WEEK UNTIL BIG JUBILEE

It will not be long now.

Just a week from tomorrow and all you Sun-Tele boys and girls will be turning toward National Amusement Park, above Aspinwall, for the greatest Jubilee of your lives.

Yes, just a week and a day and it will be Tuesday, July 3. Are you talking it over with your folks at home and preparing to go?

July 3, you know, is a famous date in American history. To keep it in mind, remember that it was on that date in 1754 that young Col. George Washington fought his first battle at Fort Necessity, and on the same day in 1775, near Boston, he took command of the American Army in the Revolutionary War. On July 3, 1863, occurred the great charge that ended the Battle of Gettysburg, and on July 3, 1898, American sailors sank and destroyed the Spanish fleet at Santiago, Cuba.

But you boys and girls of The Sun-Tele will remember the date, not as a day of battles and bloodshed, but of laughter and joy with everything free and good things to eat. Won't it be fine to celebrate the patriotic anniversaries in history by having a healthy good time? Free balloons, free French Vanilla bars, Reinhold's "cream of the valley" and free tickets to a dozen amusements inside the park. Don't forget July 3.

RAINS CAUSE ROAD SLIDE AT JOHNSTOWN

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 23.—Due to heavy rains, a big landslide occurred yesterday along Cramer pike, near here. GEE! SOMETIMES I WISH I WERE LIVING IN THE GOOD OLD FASHIONED DAYS!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

SOMETIMES after a very busy day spent dodging around among the legions of legs, I arrive back home battered, bruised, and blistered!

Sinking in my big chair to rest my weary bones, I begin to wish I were living in those good old days when traffic was no problem, and everyone could keep up with everything in a walk!

It's true they didn't have radio, telephones, automobiles, movies and jazz bands, but there are times when I wish I didn't have them either!

Modern times are marvelous, of course, but sometimes I think we have too much of everything.

It's great to have the world at your finger tips when you want to reach it, but it isn't too great to have the world reaching for your elbow when you want to be alone!

Getting to places and things the way we can today is wonderful, but the trouble is we can't get truly away from them.

It's great to listen to your own radio, but it's tough to have to listen to the other fellow's!

In the old days 85 miles away was a new world. Few ever traveled that far. But it won't be long now before old neighbors from Tasmania will be dropping in on your peaceful igloo at the North Pole in their family flivvers!

Yes, I sometimes think it must have been rather nice in those old days!

SLUGS CLERK, ARRESTED

An alleged robber who early this morning is said to have slugged Peter Laccino, 32, of 616 Sweetbriar street, night clerk in the Fountain Fruit Store, 107 Smithfield street, was captured by a policeman after a short chase in Smithfield street. After being taken to the Central Police Station the man said he was Ward Bowers, 21, of 1434 Boyle street. Laccino is in the Allegheny General Hospital suffering cuts on the head.

Bowers was held for court on a charge of forcible entry and assault and battery.

Laccino was alone in the store and when he went to the rear of the establishment the intruder stepped from behind a door and slugged him. After felling the clerk the man became frightened and ran. Patrolman Arthur Mechler captured Bowers at Water street.

FORMER GIVERS AID ICE FUND

Followers of Milk and Ice Association records find with each new season a curiosity as to the donors of contributions to The Sun-Tele Milk and Ice Fund. Just which old friends will come back this year to pay their calls and leave their gifts? Just which clubs will again remember the hundreds of babies, some of which were on the association's list last year? Just what groups of boys and girls will be prompted by that same spirit of thoughtfulness and unselfishness which has moved them in years gone by? And as the days pass and many of the same familiar names appear on the Milk and Ice Fund list, those who are putting forth their best efforts in the interest of the babies are encouraged and heartened by these evidences of unfailing help.

Truly "old friends are best," but even so, the fund could never grow satisfactorily without the donations that come from the hundreds of new friends, both children and grownups. Donations are badly needed this year for the work of providing pure, whole milk for the 300 babies of the Pittsburgh and Allegheny Milk and Ice Association.

The fund today reaches $209.48.

REFRIGERATORS SET RECORD

More than 2,000 carloads of General Electric refrigerators have been delivered to American homes since April 1.

This remarkable sales record reflects a nation-wide acceptance and indorsement for a refrigerator which has been on the market for only a little more than a year, but with a background of 16 years of development and perfection by the research laboratories of General Electrical Co.

According to W. H. Ochiltree, of the Ochiltree Electric Co., local distributor, the enormous demand has practically depleted all surplus stocks, but nine factories are now operating at full capacity and the manufacturer is confident that all orders can be filled without undue delay.

FIFTEEN MINUTES and The Bond Issue

JUST a quarter of an hour on the way to work or on the way home tomorrow night you can make a wonderful investment in PROSPERITY . . . The few minutes it'll take to drop off and CAST YOUR VOTE FOR THE BOND ISSUE will mean that there'll be lots of work for a long, long time, right here in Allegheny County.

THE $43,680,000 in public improvements the Bond Issue calls for means steady employment for thousands . . . And new Highways, new Bridges, a Town Hall, an Airport and County Parks for Pittsburgh and her citizens in the suburbs . . . Plus all the private developments these improvements will bring . . .

MEN wanted" signs will be up in a score of places where there are no jobs today . . . When the Bond Issue goes over . . . Your vote, added to those of the fellows you know, will swing the tide of Allegheny County into the highroad of PROSPERITY . . . It's YOUR VOTE that'll put it over . . .

EVERY time a new bridge is completed, it means business and industry will follow . . . And highways lead to new suburbs and lawns where children can play . . . Remember the Liberty Tubes? Well, then, take a ride out sometime into South Hills . . . Over the new Liberty Bridge . . .

NOW is the time to aid Progress and Prosperity . . . They're both just around the corner at the ballot box . . . It's YOUR chance to invest a quarter of an hour and reap the reward, perhaps, of future peace and security . . .

NEW TAILOR-TYPES

In Prints Usually Confined to Higher-Priced Dresses

Prints are rated as ordinary or otherwise partly by the company they keep, and most of the prints in these dresses are ones that women have noted in handsome dresses selling for considerably more.

They are chiefly the smaller conventional and floral patterns which are much in demand now, and which are especially effective in the simple styles of Tailor-Type. The color combinations include navy-and-white, black-and-white, beige-and-navy, and high shades on white backgrounds.

In style and fitting qualities, the dresses conform to the high standards set by Tailor-Type; and they offer a size range of 34 to 44.

Women's New Silk Coats

These are rich black coats which give the impression of being expensive—most of them made of heavy faille and crepe faille, all of them lined with crepe satin of beautiful texture.

They are unfurred coats with neat Johnny collars or graceful scarf neck finishes, which will serve not only as smart separate wraps, but as the basis of ensembles with printed black-and-white dresses.

All regular sizes, 34 to 44, are to be had in them.

Care of the Colon One Health Secret

THERE is a fixed idea on the part of many doctors that the state of the health depends on the condition of the colon. They are about right as I see it.

DR. COPELAND

You will recall that the lowest and final part of the intestinal tract is called the colon. In constipation this is more or less packed with fecal matter. The popular idea is that all this is waste material, that the body has appropriated what it could use and has rejected because it possesses nothing of value. While much of it is waste, pure and simple, a considerable part of the contents of the colon is made up of dead bacteria and bacterial growth.

Because of intestinal sluggishness and the action of the germs or bacteria upon the fecal matter, fermentation and putrefication result. These processes produce poisons which are absorbed by the system and cause all sorts of symptoms. Headaches, loss of sleep, fitful appetite, inflammation of the bowel lining, neuritis, and loss of general efficiency are common effects.

Since it became known that the colon is capable of holding such a putrid mass of germ-laden material, there has been much discussion of what to do about it. To get rid of the reservoir it used to be recommended in the most solemn manner to operate and remove the colon.

Operations are often necessary and, when properly done, promote human happiness and extend the span of life. But, in any case, I view with suspicion the advice to operate, unless the doctor has given consideration first to every possible remedial measure. Certainly, it would be a confession of medical weakness to remove an organ simply because its function might be delayed.

Along comes another authority claiming that old age is due to intestinal germs. He recommended sour milk as a means of relief, pointing to the Bulgarians, who drink much of it, as wonderful examples of youthfulness even in advanced age.

The latest plan to overcome intestinal fermentation is to give cultures of "Bacillus Acidophilus," milk containing this germ. This is really useful.

You know how important it is to keep the weeds out of your garden, so that the "garden truck" can grow. If you plant thickly the seeds of your vegetables and properly cultivate the soil, the good seeds grow and thrive, giving the rank weeds no chance.

The purpose of giving the bacillus acidophilus is to plant in the colon, colonies or gardens of a friendly and useful germ. When once it is thriving, the bad and fermenting germs are crowded out. When the unwelcome germs no longer multiply, fermentation and putrefaction disappear. This is the theory.

Unfortunately, lack of exactness in carrying out the methods of using the Bulgarian bacillus and the bacillus acidophilus, may result in failure of relief. There may be other reasons for failure. Chief of these, perhaps, is the wrong choice of the daily foods and the lack of exercise.

Common sense demands that the natural methods should come first. Then we may add the use of kindly and friendly germs to kill off the unfriendly and harmful intestinal bacteria. Here it is that the bacillus acidophilus may serve mankind.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, June 26

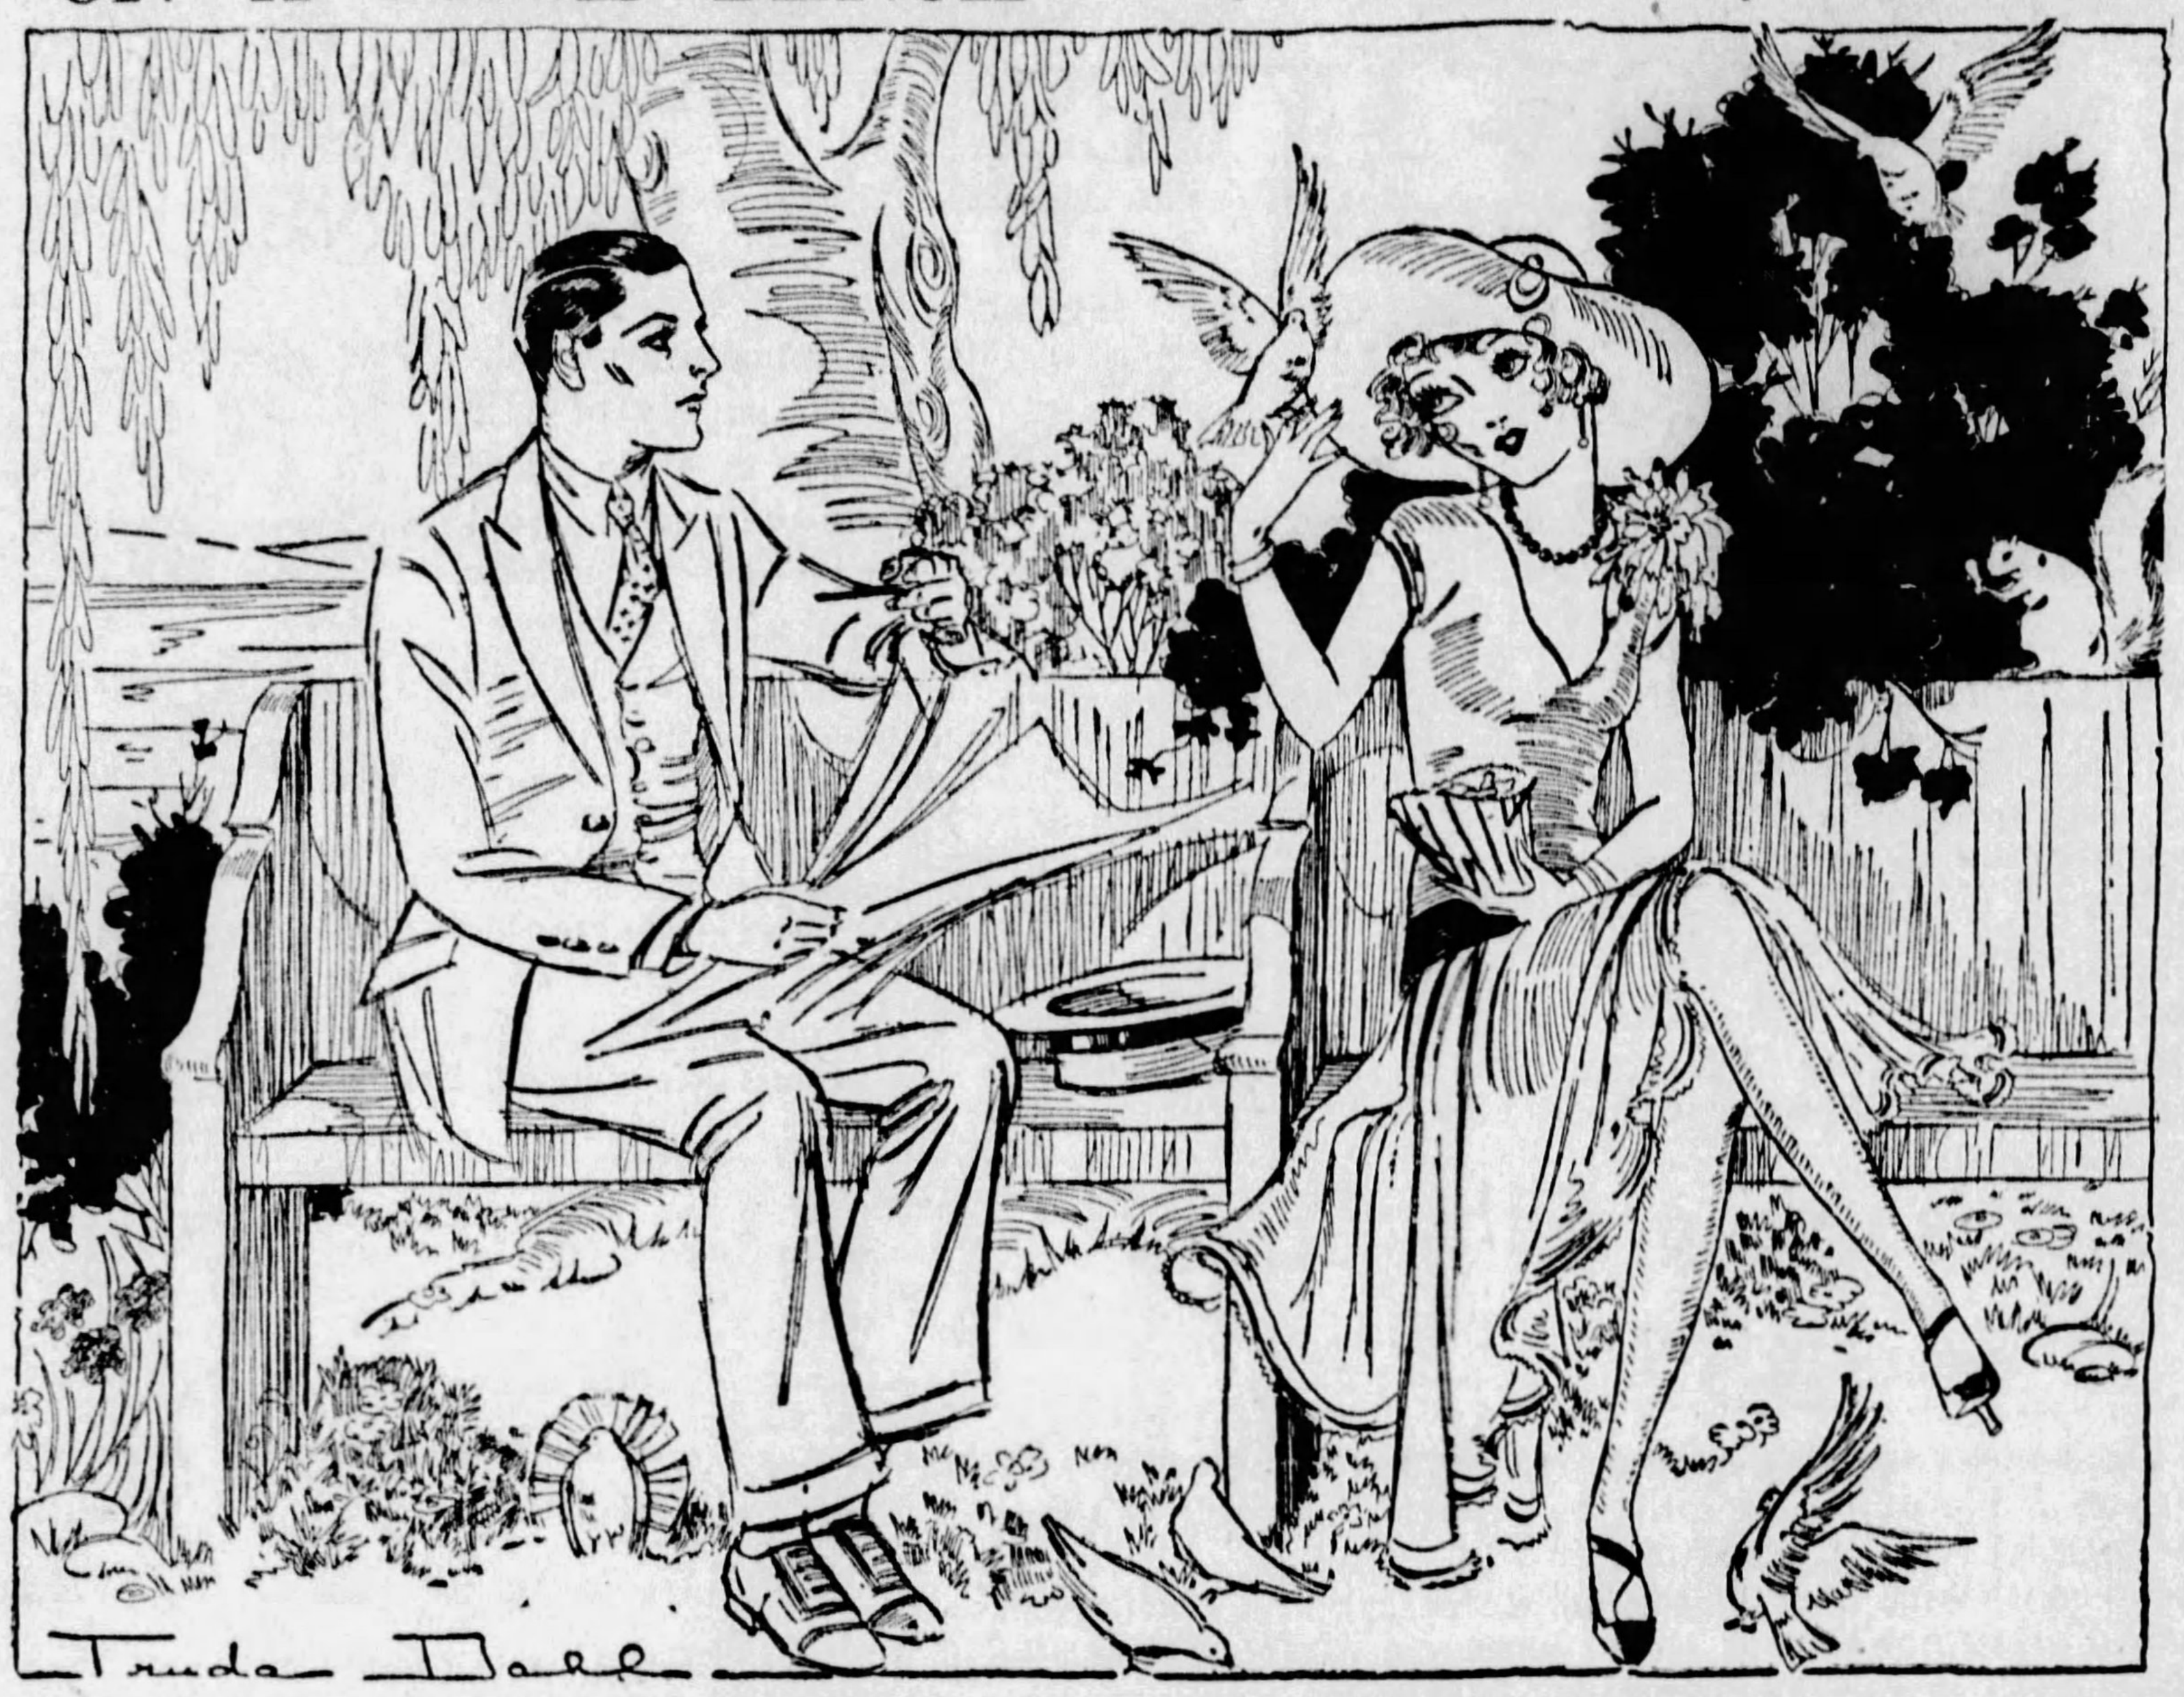
THE astral forces on this day seem to direct the powers to secret and interior aspirations and at the same time to heighten the ambitions toward worldly power, progress and position. In either direction there is promise of planetary assistance, it being a time for making choice and bending the energies in the trend of the desires. Achievement and fruition of purpose are assured.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of fulfillment of the most cherished desires. There is promise of progress, prosperity and position in whatever direction the energies are bent. New projects should prosper.

A child born on this day is splendidly equipped for success, progress and fulfillment of its highest ideals or ambitions in life.

In man there appears to be a conflict of diverse wills.—KINGSFORD.

ON A PARK BENCH -:- -:- By Truda Dahl



OH, if he only dared! The girl about whom he has dreamed all his life suddenly becomes a reality when he looks over the top of his paper and spies her sitting on the very bench which he has chosen here in the park. If he could only speak to her, but he dare not for fear of being repulsed. She's busy with the doves that flutter 'round her head and for once in his life he wishes that he, too, were a dove, that he might be privileged to touch her dainty fingers.

Well, it's Fate—there's no getting around that, but how is he going to manage to hear her voice? "Love ever finds a way" and when you KNOW that it is love, there's only one thing to do—be patient! Hard? Perhaps, but you know you mustn't take the chance of frightening away the most precious thing in life. And eventually everything will come out right, for Dan's on the job—and he's a most thorough young rascal.

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Last

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am writing a few lines to ask you if you think I am a normal girl. I am 18 years of age and considered pretty and attractive in my set. I have been around quite a few places for my age. I guess that is due to my working since I was 15 years old. I have a position now around quite a few men in an office. I love to dance and am always over popular when I go to them. I like to read very much and I like all kinds of sports. I don't know how to swim, but am considering joining the Natatorium in Pittsburgh in order to learn. Miss Gale, I have been studying men since I was 15 and I am going on 19 now, and I just can't seem to return the interest they have in me. Men, Miss Gale, bore me, sometimes to tears. I go out on quite a few dates, but they all turn out the same. I just can't seem to wait until every one leaves and I am by myself again. It seems I am looking for something I cannot find. In other words I am lost. I have a girl friend who thinks the same way as I do on the fellow question. She keeps making dates thinking she will find someone in the end who can interest her. I am a great pretender among my friends, but the truth is I am not enjoying myself. Do you think it is natural in me that I should feel the way I do about men? Do you think I am just tired of them? Mother says I am going to be an old maid. Do you thing so, Miss Gale?. LAST.

Everyone "pretends" a little, my dear, and everyone is looking for someone who can really interest him or her. Don't think of yourself as peculiar at all, and try not to think of yourself as being bored. It is a bad habit to acquire.

Just Ally

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a constant reader of the lovelorn column and agree with you on the various subjects. I have never before come to you with any difficulties, but am coming to you now.

I am 17 years of age and am going with a fellow 22 years old. He used to go with a certain girl before I met him (I heard he was with her every evening), but now he goes sometimes on Wednesday nights and sometimes on Sunday. Of course, it is natural for him to still go with her as he went with her for three years.

My question is this, Miss Gale, I love this boy friend, and do you think he is too old for me? I remain,

JUST ALLY.

Don't count too much on this boy's liking you, my dear. He seems still to like the other girl. He is not too old for you.

Betty

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have never written before, but I'm here now, Miss Gale. My first is: I'm in love with a boy about 18 or 19. He looks very nice to me. He works where I do and we often argue for fun about anything. He punches me and I punch him back. Could you please give me some points as how to get him to love me. I am only 18 years old and rather plump. I dress nicely and have many friends of both sexes.

BETTY.

In the first place, my dear, you are acting in a most undignified fashion with this boy, and your conduct probably makes him think of you as a child. He should not act as he does, either, but if you insist on it he will stop this silly "punching."

Disappointed Blondes

DEAR MISS GALE:

We enjoy reading your column very much. Now we have come to you for advice. We are two girls in our teens. We look, act and always agree with one another. We are always taken for sisters. We are girls that do not believe in kissing, smoking, drinking or petting. Have given up hopes, for we cannot find our type of fellows. We have gone out recently with a good many and they do all the things we dislike. Every fellow calls us "flat tires," "slow" or "saints." Is there any way to find our type of fellows or shall we give up. Hoping to hear from you soon, we remain,

DISAPPOINTED BLONDES.

You are much too young, my dears, to be so hopeless. There are lots of worth-while boys who feel that these things are degrading, just as you do. Don't let these other boys alter your opinions.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

DEFENDING THE MODERN GIRL

I AM beginning to think that the American girl is being highly misrepresented.

I have never yet seen a girl who dressed as weirdly as a John Held flapper or who did her hair in a wet-mop effect. Neither have I ever met one who was so snappily rowdy as the wise-cracking damsels in the college magazines. Perhaps I should travel more.

If there are any girls who loll around on men's laps in drawing rooms at teas and parties, and dance on pianos juggling cocktail shakers, like those in the erotic magazines, I've missed finding them—and the loss is all mine!

HELEN ROWLAND

If any modern American girl is as hard-boiled and utterly colorless as the stony-eyed heroines of most popular novels, she has escaped my eagle eye—or else I've been terribly deceived.

In short, I am beginning to suspect that this picture of the gin-drinking, gold-digging, wise-cracking, non-marrying modern girl is a fiction of man's imagination.

If a man can only convince himself that all women are rowdy, cold-blooded and shallow, he has a wonderful alibi for keeping out of marriage—and keeping all his time and money for himself.

Certainly, nobody could expect any fair young man in possession of all his faculties to risk himself alone after dark, with any of the little hard-boiled four-flushers in the comic strips or the funny magazines.

But all these are WRONG! The great fault of the modern American girl, today, is not that she is too hard-boiled, but that she is too SOFT-BOILED. She is TOO KIND!

As long as she continues to make life one long, sweet song for the average man, naturally he is not going to exchange it for a lullaby.

As long as he can call her up on 10 minutes' notice and break the news that he is going to bestow his society on her for the evening, why should he give her 24 hours to think it over? As long as he can announce where he is going to take her and receive polite gurgles of joy, why should he consult her taste in the matter?

As long as he can do all his courting with a few gallons of gasoline, why should he bother with sentimental nonsense like flowers or books?

The modern girl is a good little scout—but she's too easily pleased, too easily satisfied, too soft-boiled! Her grandmother was a 30-minute egg beside her!

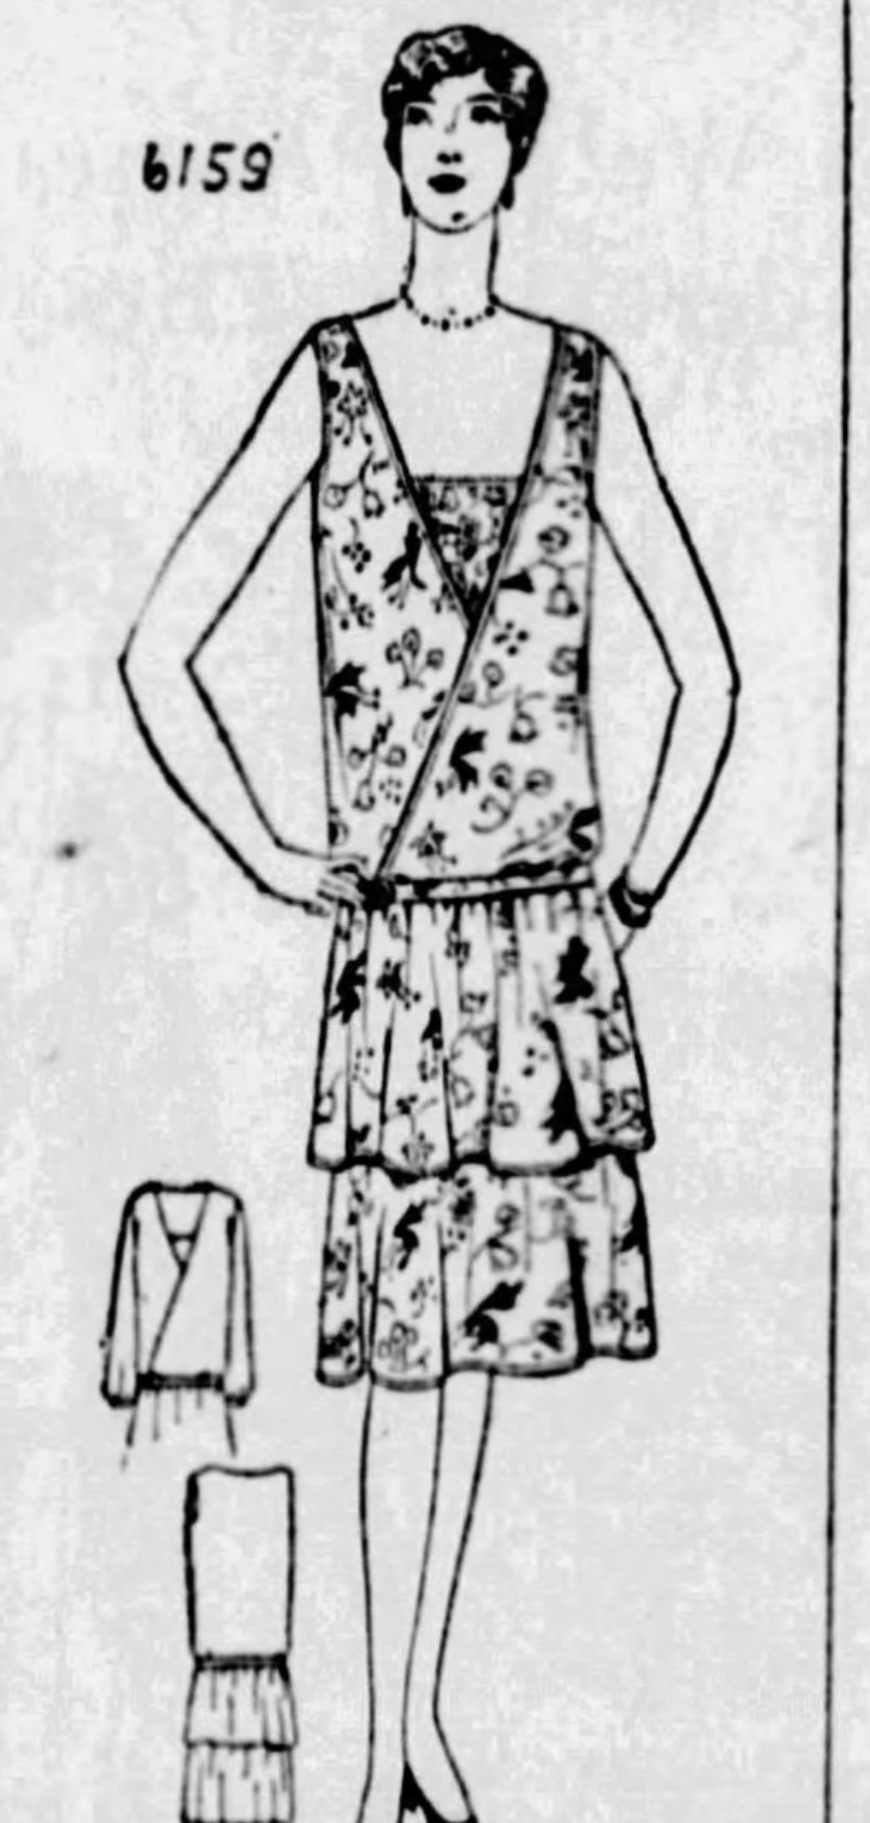
The Sun-Telegraph Fifteen Cent Pattern



A PRETTY TWO-IN-ONE FROCK

This attractive style makes a pretty afternoon or evening dress, by adding or omitting the sleeves. It is suitable for satin, crepe de chine, printed chiffon or georgette, tulle or taffeta.

The pattern is cut in five sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. To make the dress for a 38-inch size with sleeves will require 4½ yards of 39-inch material, 1 yard of 32-inch lining for the underbody, and ¼ yard of 10-inch lace for the vestee. If made without sleeves 3¾ yards of material will be required. The width of the dress at the lower edge is about 2⅝ yards.

COUPON.

This pattern will be sent on receipt of 15 cents (silver or 2c and 1c stamps). Make number, name, address, etc., plain. Send to Pattern Department, The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Bebe Daniels (Paramount) and the bathroom her charm inspired

"Smooth skin instantly attracts," says Victor Fleming, PARAMOUNT director

"Every screen star realizes how vitally important this beauty is. Her skin must have real loveliness under the close-up lights."

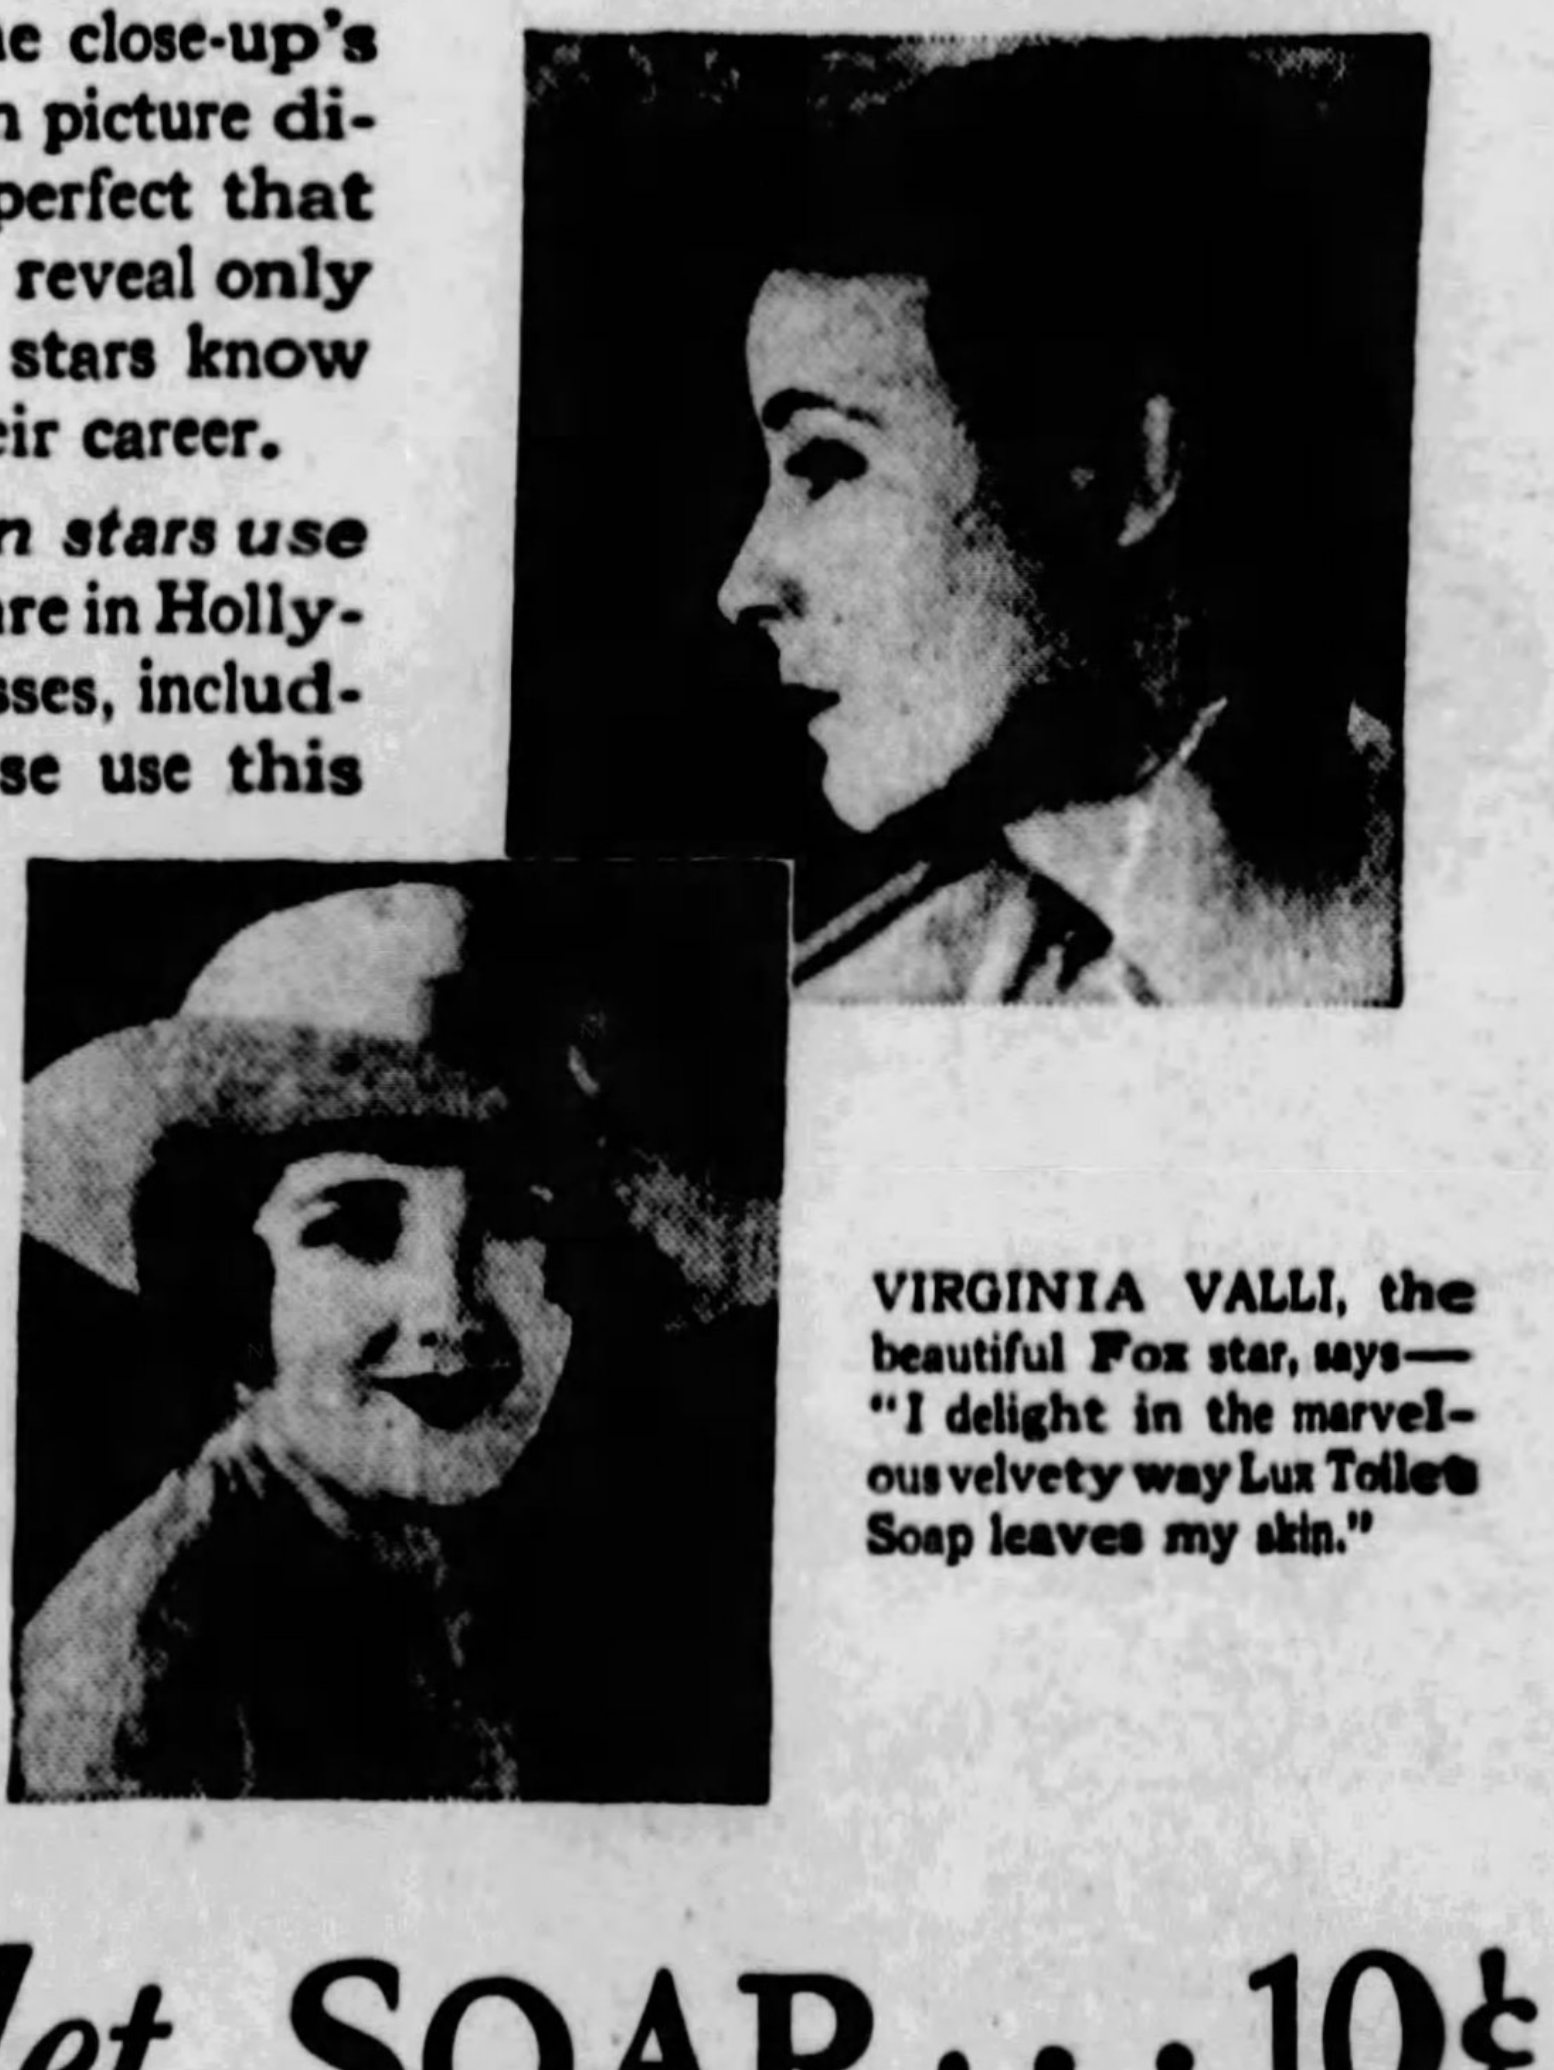
"Many girls lacking great beauty, but possessing lovely skin, have passed on the road to fame women with perfect features. Lux Toilet Soap is a great help in keeping the skin smooth and lovely."
Bebe Daniels

A QUICK throb of emotion—you catch your breath at the flower-like beauty of smooth, soft skin.

Screen stars unfailingly possess this loveliness which makes the close-up's appeal irresistible. Motion picture directors insist on skin so perfect that the pitiless close-up lights reveal only alluring beauty. Screen stars know smooth skin is vital to their career.

Nine out of ten screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap. There are in Hollywood 433 important actresses, including all stars. 417 of these use this fragrant, white soap.

All the great film studios have made it the official soap in their dressing rooms.



MERNA KENNEDY, lovely United Artists star, says—"Lux Toilet Soap keeps my skin marvelously smooth."

VIRGINIA VALLI, the beautiful Fox star, says—"I delight in the marvelous velvety way Lux Toilet Soap leaves my skin."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Flowers and Summer Gowns to Mingle as Virginia Willock Makes Bow at Garden Party Friday

THERE'S something picturesque, isn't there, about a garden party? The very mention of one suggests to me a picture of demure young girls in organdy frocks and wide floppy hats, walking down a hollyhock-bordered path, flecked with sunshine. And what lovelier way could there be of introducing one's daughter to society than at a garden party in the magic month of June?

The Frank Scott Willocks, of Sewickley, will present their daughter Virginia at a garden party on Friday in the Allegheny Country Club, you know. And if that most unwelcome guest, rain, will be kind enough to stay away, it will be a lovely garden party. Virginia has been entertained a great deal, I hear, at dinners and luncheons and bridges, all rather informal as befits the languor of early summer.

Shortly after Virginia makes her "bow" as one of Pittsburgh's few but lovely June "buds," the Willocks will go away. Shortly after the Fourth of July they will go to Dark Harbor, Maine, for the summer.

Jane Joy Edson, daughter of Mrs. John Joy Edson, Jr., is another debutante of June, you know. And she, like Virginia, has been honored at many a summer entertainment. There will be one for this week, I hear, in fact tomorrow. Mrs. James Barlow Cullum is planning a dinner dance for Jane.

Jane shared honors with her guest, Kingsley Kehler, of Princeton, N. J., and Nancy Pemberton, of Philadelphia, at a luncheon Mrs. Donald Thompson gave Thursday in the Allegheny Country Club.

SOMEONE has said that one proof of a girl's popularity is the number of her friends who ask her to be their bridesmaid. By this test, as well as many others, Eleanor Chalfant is surely a popular member of Pittsburgh's younger set. On Saturday she was a bridesmaid again. She and Nancy Yuille, of New York, and Katherine Snyder and Ira Hunter DeButts, of Washington, were attendants at the marriage of Elizabeth Baker Kemp, of Middleburg, Va., and Samuel Ferguson Beach, son of the Morgan H. Beaches, of Washington.

MARY LOUISE JOHNSON, daughter of Mrs. William Terrell Johnson, who made her bow to society this past winter, you remember, is another popular young girl sought out already as a bridesmaid. She will be one of the seven attendants Patricia Isabelle Power, daughter of Mrs. Edward William Cameron Arnold, of Oknok, West Islip, Long Island, will have at her wedding. Patricia has just named July 7 as the date for her marriage to M. Marshal Marston, of Washington, D. C. And the wedding ceremony will take place in Christ Church at West Islip.

AND while we are talking about wedding attendants, men of the social set are out of the city occasionally, as well as the girls, to be wedding attendants. Arthur B. Van Buskirk was one of the ushers at the wedding Wednesday of Nina Albertson, daughter of Mrs. Edward Scott Christie, of London, England, and Frederick Henry Knight of New York. The wedding wasn't in England, though, but in St. John's of Lattingtown, Locust Valley, Long Island.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the marriage of Miss Grace McCloskey, daughter of Mrs. Sadie McCloskey, of Coleman street, and Leo F. Flatley, son of Mrs. Catherine Flatley, of Greenfield avenue, which was solemnized last Tuesday morning in St. Rosalia's Catholic Church by the Rev. John Faughman.

MR. AND MRS. S. ROSENBERG, of Dawson street, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jeannette Rosenberg, to Benjamin Friedland, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Friedland, of Burchfield avenue. Mrs. Friedland gave a luncheon Friday in Webster Hall in honor of the engagement.

MRS. PETER M. DICKSON and Miss Carrie Dickson, or Whipple street, entertained with a miscellaneous shower in their home Saturday afternoon in honor of Miss Dorothy McCutcheon, of Ford City, whose marriage to Ralph H. Greb, of Swissvale, will be solemnized Wednesday.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the marriage of Miss Vera Darling, daughter of Mrs. Etta Darling, of Mars, Pa., and Clifford Huggins, of Gibsonia, which was solemnized Wednesday at 4 o'clock in the study of the Mars United Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Dr. S. L. Louden. Miss Valley Darling, sister of the bride, and Lester Dean, of Mars, were the attendants. After an eastern trip, Mr. and Mrs. Huggins will be at home in Gibsonia.

MRS. ROSE COLLINS JONES, formerly of Pittsburgh, has announced the marriage of her daughter, Miss Frances Mary Jones, and Ben Edwards Watkins, son of the late Dr. Arthur Allen Watkins, of Arnot, Pa., and Mrs. B. V. Lyons, of Lake Jovita, Fla. The ceremony was performed last Tuesday morning in St. Leo's Abbey, St. Leo, Fla., by the Rt. Rev. Abbot Charles.

MR. AND MRS. J. J. BROWN, of Allison Park, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding last Wednesday with a second ceremony in the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, with the Rev. Thomas Bigham officiating.

MR. AND MRS. VICTOR DIFFENBACHER, of Houston, Tex., have motored to Pittsburgh and are guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Diffenbacher, of Rosslyn Farms.

THE wedding of Miss Arabella White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James White, of Sutherland street, Sheraden, and Marcel H. Kinney, of Uniontown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Florent Kinney, of Sheraden, took place Wednesday night in the Episcopal Church of the Messiah with Canon Wilson officiating. The bride wore white taffeta and tulle with a veil of rose point lace, and carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Celia Kinney, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and the flower girl was Joan Challingsworth. Williard Keebler, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. George O. White, brother of the bride, was best man and the ushers included James K. White and Harold Boone. Albert H. Ingley played the wedding music and S. C. Nichols sang. A reception in the White home followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Kinney are taking a short trip and after July 25 will be at home in Uniontown.

MISS NATALIE DUNBAR, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Nelson Dunbar, of Thomas boulevard, was graduated last week from Smith College. In September, Miss Dunbar will continue her studies in psychiatry in Philadelphia.

RAIN DRIVES -:- GARDEN PARTY -:- TO INDOORS

IT RAINED!

Although the garden party of the Dioceasan Girls' Friendly Society turned out to be a parish house party, it was a success nevertheless. Eleanor Edwards, Jean Browne, Wilma Fellows, Margaret Browne, Helen Oyer, Grace Abbott and Dorothy Chandler as aides helped make it so.

The affair was held in the parish house, Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, Squirrel Hill. This group includes Miss Bertha Gibson, Mrs. Charles R. Luker, Mrs. E. Sydney Youden, the Rev. Dr. John Dows Hills, the Rev. Dr. Robert Nelson Meade, and Miss Evelyn Buchanan.

QUOTA CLUB HEARS BOND ISSUE OPPOSED

MRS. HENRY CHALFANT MILLER, of the Allegheny County League of Women Voters, is speaking against the proposed county bond issue before the Quota Club at luncheon in the William Penn Hotel today. Miss Anna Egan, Quota's president, and Miss Mary Russell Purman, a former Pittsburgh president, as well as a former international president, left for Davenport, Ia., to attend the international Quota convention there this week. Both are stopping off to visit friends in Ohio on their way west and will be joined in Davenport by Miss Jane Arens, who left today and who will take an extended western trip before returning home. While the convention does not officially open until Wednesday morning, there will be an informal reception for the visiting delegates tomorrow night. The local club entertained last Thursday at luncheon in the Congress of Clubs in honor of Miss Beatrice Jones, delegate from the New York Quota, who was the guest of her sister, Mrs. C. Fitzhugh Lee, of Ben Avon. Mrs. Lee shared honors with her sister.

MISS MARGARET CRUTCHFIELD, of Sewickley, will be the speaker Tuesday at the meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Pittsburgh Presbytery in the First Church, Pittsburgh. Miss Crutchfield, who is a student volunteer, will tell of the international missionary conference held recently in Jerusalem.

MRS. EMMA REICH will be toastmistress at the banquet which the St. Clair Community Center will give Wednesday in the Spring Lane School. Mrs. Reich will be assisted by Mrs. Margaret Berger, Mrs. Lida Schafer, Mrs. Hazel Workman, Mrs. Elsie Kilbert, Mrs. Helen Lamberger, Miss Stella McCarthy, Mrs. Mae Conley, Mrs. Lena Arand and Mrs. Annabelle Conley.

MRS. ALFRED KERKHAN and her aides of the civic committee will have charge of the Carrick Mothers' Club annual baby day in the clubhouse next Friday. Nurses from three different institutions will be present and the club members will serve an inexpensive luncheon to the mothers who are there at noon.

MRS. ROSE BRAUN has invited members and friends of the Pittsburgh Council of Catholic Women to attend a garden bridge tea benefit for the Council at her home, Delafield and Waldheim roads, Aspinwall, on Saturday, July 14. During the afternoon there will be esthetic and modern dancing by Elizabeth R. Holt, Lois Thomas and Bernice Arbuthnot.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

GIFT TO A LADY

By ERIC HEATH

DICKY and Louise had reached the point of "not speaking to each other." The strain was beginning to tell on them, especially on Louise.

"To think of being married less than two years, and having to go around like a mummy!" she mourned to herself, but she always added, "But I won't give in. I won't. Not till he does."

It seemed strange to eat their meals together, silently, without the customary arguments. Dick even reached for the salt, rather than ask her to pass it.

"But he needn't think he can nag at me all the time the way he does. I'll just teach him a lesson," Louise decided whenever she felt herself weakening. "Just because his mother isn't extravagant is no reason why he should call me a 'spendthrift.' If he thinks his mother is so perfect, why doesn't he go back home to live and desert me! I'd like to see him dare to do it!"

Every move Dick made toward a reconciliation, Louise carefully countered. It was like playing a continual game of chess, only much more exciting.

But one evening there occurred an unlooked for move in the game—a move for which Louise was totally unprepared. She was weeping through the curtains of the front bedroom window as Dick sauntered up the street, with stride that seemed somewhat more jaunty than usual. Under his arm he carried a large paper parcel.

"A present," Louise muttered to herself. "I wonder what in the world it is!"

Dick was whistling as he came upstairs. Louise avoided him by going down the back way.

The package was not, as she had expected, on the living room table. She looked in the dining room. It wasn't there.

"I suppose he thinks he is going to pull some kind of surprise stuff," she murmured to herself. Then another solution offered itself. "Gosh! Suppose he bought it as a present for some other woman, and is just flaunting it in my face!" The very idea made her seethe with rage. Then she reflected. "But why would he hide it away, if he wanted me to see it?"

She had not looked in the hallway. She dashed out, and gave a little gasp, as she saw it there on the telephone table in the alcove. So he hadn't even bothered to hide it away! Well, at least, he was not trying to deceive her, and that was something! But to be so brazen as to bring it home and leave it lying around like that!

In spite of her firm resolution to pretend that she had not seen the package, Louise felt herself being irresistibly drawn toward it. In another moment she was hovering over it, gingerly feeling the edges. She listened. Suppose Dick should come down suddenly and see her snooping! That would be unbearable.

But her curiosity got the better of her attempt to be cautious and indifferent. Almost before she knew it, her fingers had unloosed the cord, had pulled back one edge of the paper, just a trifle. She leaned down and peeped in. She could hardly restrain a little cry of delight. It was the set of amber glassware she had longed for; the tray, the cunningly shaped pitcher, the six tall glasses; she had imagined time after time what fun it would be to serve iced drinks with that set. She loved amber. She thought it was the most beautiful color in the world.

In a flash, she realized how much she loved Dick. After all, he was a dear. And to buy that lovely set for her! Their quarrel had been just a hideous mistake, just foolishness. She would tell him that she was sorry—and yes, she would have the amber set out on the table when he came down.

Carefully she picked up the package, and carried it into the living room. Piece by piece she unwrapped it and arranged it on the table, pausing now and then to step back and admire it. The amber was warm and glowing under the soft light of the shaded lamp.

She heard his footsteps on the stairway. Taking a quick little breath, she prepared herself for his entrance into the room. When he appeared, she rushed toward him.

"Dick! You darling!"

"What—what on earth—" he began, but her kisses drowned out his words.

"Dick, I'm sorry. I'll never behave like that again, honest. It was my fault. I own up to it. I'll let you talk about your mother all you please, and—"

At that instant the front door bell rang. Dick went to answer it, and Louise hung in the doorway, wondering who it could be just at dinner time.

"Mother!" Dick exclaimed, as he opened the door.

A fashionably dressed, middle-aged woman entered.

"I just dropped in for a moment to see you children," she said. "I'm on my way home from the Carhearts', and I wanted to ask you to a theater party I'm giving next week."

As soon as she entered the living room she caught sight of the amber set. She turned back to Dick smiling.

"You dear boy! So you bought it for me, after all? I shouldn't have told you that I wanted it, I suppose. Isn't it a beauty, Louise? Dick saw me admiring it last week when we were downtown together . . ." She stopped abruptly, noticing the tenseness in the faces of her son and daughter-in-law.

"Why, what's the matter?" she asked. "Have I made a mistake? Dick? Why don't you answer me?"

"Well, er——" he stammered.

Louise stiffened. She flashed him an indignant glance.

"Don't try to hedge!" she commanded. "Did you buy it for your mother or for me?"

"Why, I——" He stopped, embarrassed, and fidgetted nervously with his tie.

"Did you admire it, too, Louise? Did you say that you wanted it?" Mrs. Stratton asked.

"Yes," Louise admitted. Then she added, decisively, "But I'm sure he bought it for you."

"Oh, no my dear, of course not. He bought it for you," Mrs. Stratton declared firmly.

"No, for you."

"Not at all, for you. I'm certain of it."

"Well, I wouldn't have it now for anything. You must take it," Louise asserted.

"Of course I shan't."

"Yes, please do."

Mrs. Stratton had moved over, and stood looking down at the set at one side of the table. Louise was on the other side of the table.

"Isn't it lovely," Mrs. Stratton said. "I've always adored amber things."

"So have I," Louise murmured.

When Mrs. Stratton looked over at her a moment later, she saw that a big tear was trickling down one side of her piquant little nose. She went around and took her in her arms.

"You dear baby!" she exclaimed. "Do you think for a moment that I would take the set away from you."

"It isn't that——," Louise returned tremulously, "I want you to have it. Dick bought it for you."

Say, honestly," Dick broke in, exasperated. "You'd think I couldn't possibly afford to get another set."

"But that wouldn't be the same thing," Louise objected. She sniffed, then she managed a feeble little smile.

"I'll tell you what, mother," she said finally, "We'll both have it. I'll take three glasses and you take three, and then you can have either the tray or the pitcher—"

"Which would you rather have?"

"It doesn't make any difference to me. You choose the one you want."

"Then it's all decided," Louise said. "Mother, please do stay to dinner with us, won't you?"

All during dinner, Louise wondered whether Dick had really bought the set for her or for his Mother, but, wisely, she decided she would never ask him; she had learned that some times it is better for married people not to ask each other too many questions.

LIBRARY SCHOOL OPENS JUNE 30

This year the Carnegie Library School will hold its first summer session, from July 2 to August 11. Students must register on Saturday morning, June 30. Courses especially planned to meet the needs of library teachers in platoon schools will be offered, as well as courses in library work with children from the public library point of view. Information regarding the courses may be secured by calling at the office of the Library School in the Carnegie Institute Building.

The regular one-year course of the Carnegie Library School will begin this fall on September 11. The number of applications already on file is large, with a high percentage of college graduates. Entrance examinations for those who do not have their college degrees will be given on August 22 and 23. All applicants are required to have had at least one year of college work.

The largest class at the Carnegie Library School in the last several years, on June 14 a class of 43 was graduated, shows the increasing interest and attention which is being given to library work as a profession by young people today.

THE NEW ERA

Is out-of-town telephone service expensive?

Let's see!

A quarter? You can travel 25 or 30 miles over new era telephone lines for that amount.

Fifty cents? That amount will take you on a 60 mi' trip by telephone.

Seventy-five cents? Every town within a radius of 100 miles.

Here are a few samples:

Altoona	65c	Warren, Pa.	75c
Mercer	45c	Wheeling	35c
Morgantown	50c	Youngstown	45c

Out-of-town service today is easy, speedy, accurate, dependable, and last but not least—

Its cost is extremely low!

WESTMINSTER TO DEDICATE NEW HALL

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., June 25.—Officials in charge of the construction of Old Main Memorial, new main building at Westminster College, announce that all possible speed will be made to have the new edifice ready for occupancy with the opening of the college year on September 19. The new building, of collegiate Gothic style, is constructed of native Lawrence county stone, trimmed in Indiana limestone. It is situated approximately on the site of Old Main, destroyed by fire on the morning of January 24, 1927, and will contain a chapel, 20 classrooms, instructors' offices, the college offices, and a public-speaking hall.

A Gothic memorial tower, containing the old college bell, salvaged from the ruins of Old Main, will rise 112 feet. Irregular flagstone will be used to form walks on the south terrace of the campus at the front of the building, and its setting in natural beauty will give to Westminster one of the most beautiful college buildings in the country.

Robert Audley Browne Hall, new residence hall for men, was opened for inspection at the commencement exercises in June. This building will accommodate 100 men.

With these new facilities for residence and instruction, Westminster will be prepared to accommodate the increasing number of students who seek entrance each year. Last year a net enrollment of 549 students include' more than 125 from the Pittsburgh district.

The Westminster faculty, headed by scholars from the best colleges and universities of the country, numbers 33, 12 of whom have doctors' degrees. In all, 23 different institutions, from all sections of the country, are represented among the professors.

In athletics during the past year the United Presbyterians have made an excellent record. Two Tri-State Conference championships have been won, the basketball and cross-country teams winning the conference titles. In football and track, third place was won in the conference, while in tennis, a sport in which the Westminster players excelled in the conference for the last three years, a second place was won this year.

PRACTICAL EDUCATION IS ACADEMY'S AIM

Among many of the leading business and professional men of Pittsburgh are found graduates of the Pittsburgh Academy, and many of the women students also have attained eminence. Close application to study with a view to the practical side of life to which an education is to be applied has been one of the secrets of the success won by Academy students.

Herbert G. Lytle, son of the founder, is head of the modern school.

ACCOUNTANTS IN DEMAND HERE

By ERNEST CROWTHER, C. P. A.,
Dean Pittsburgh School of Accountancy.

Accountancy, being the youngest among professions in the United States, has but recently emerged from the apprenticeship system of training to enter the field of formal education, where certain well defined standards of general learning and technical skill are maintained. In Western Pennsylvania, the outstanding independent institution of this type is the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy, from which annually go a large number of young men and women into responsible positions in the great industrial and business organizations in the Pittsburgh district and elsewhere.

Outside of these larger establishments, however, there still exists a widespread misconception of the functions of the trained accountant. The notion that he is an expert bookkeeper to be called upon only when business records happen to get into an ugly snarl, is altogether too common. Bookkeeping is merely the proper recording from day to day of actual business transactions, whereas accountancy embraces the whole field of management and operation in business and industry, large or small.

The ranks of some of the older professions are more or less overcrowded, and not infrequently it happens that one spends the best years of his life in the struggle to gain a foothold, but in accountancy, with new industries constantly developing and old ones expanding, that time, so far as this country is concerned, is far in the future, if indeed it ever comes.

It is precisely this situation that makes the school of accountancy so attractive to high school students whose inclination is toward a business career. There is, however, a distinct tendency, now more than ever before, for large establishments to recruit their chief executive officers from accounting departments.

SHADY SIDE NOW IN 45TH YEAR

Shady Side Academy, Pittsburgh's oldest preparatory school, will open its seventh season on its new location on the Fox Chapel road, where it is housed in eight modern brick buildings in the midst of a campus of 125 acres. The school was founded 45 years ago.

The academy has a recitation hall, three dormitories, gymnasium, dining hall, infirmary and power plant, together with several residences occupied by members of the school faculty. Athletic sports are well provided for, in addition to the large and well-equipped gymnasium, there being a new field for football and baseball, a quarter-mile running track, eight tennis court and a golf course.

The junior school of the academy is still situated at Ellsworth and Morewood avenues. Boys from 6 to 12 years are enrolled here. The session at the city school opens on September 26.

Shady Side is one of the oldest and best known of American preparatory schools. The academy numbers among its alumni many leading professional and business men of Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania, as well as other sections of the country. The academy prepares boys for entrance to all colleges and universities.

CLAUSE HEADS GROVE CITY

At the meeting of the board of trustees of Grove City College on Tuesday, June 12, William L. Clause, the chairman of the board of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, was elected President. Mr. Clause succeeds J. Howard Pew, of Philadelphia, who served out the term of F. R. Babcock, who died last November. Mr. Clause has been a member of the board of trustees of the college since 1917 and has been active in its council. He is a leader in the business and civic life of the Pittsburgh district.

Among those present at the board meeting from the Pittsburgh district were: Mr. Clause, W. H. Burchfield, A. M. Thompson, Frederick B. Hufnagel, J. S. Crutchfield, William M. Robinson, Wilson A. Campbell, Dr. Harry Winner. Others present were: Mr. Pew, John G. Pew, of New York; H. J. Crawford, of Emlenton; W. S. McKay, of Greenville; Melvin Miller, of Mercer; John Marshall, of Beaver; Dr. E. J. Fithian, E. B. Harshaw, M. L. McBride and M. W. Graham, of Grove City.

The board authorized the appointments for the year of 1928-29 of Miss Kathryn E. Anderson for English and education, Miss Roberta Melcher as director of physical education to fill the temporary vacancy of Miss Esther E. Post, and Don B. Corbin as instructor in music. The board also authorized the expenditure of approximately $20,000 on improvements on the campus and buildings.

At the commencement exercises a class of 121 was graduated. The class was the largest in the history of the college.

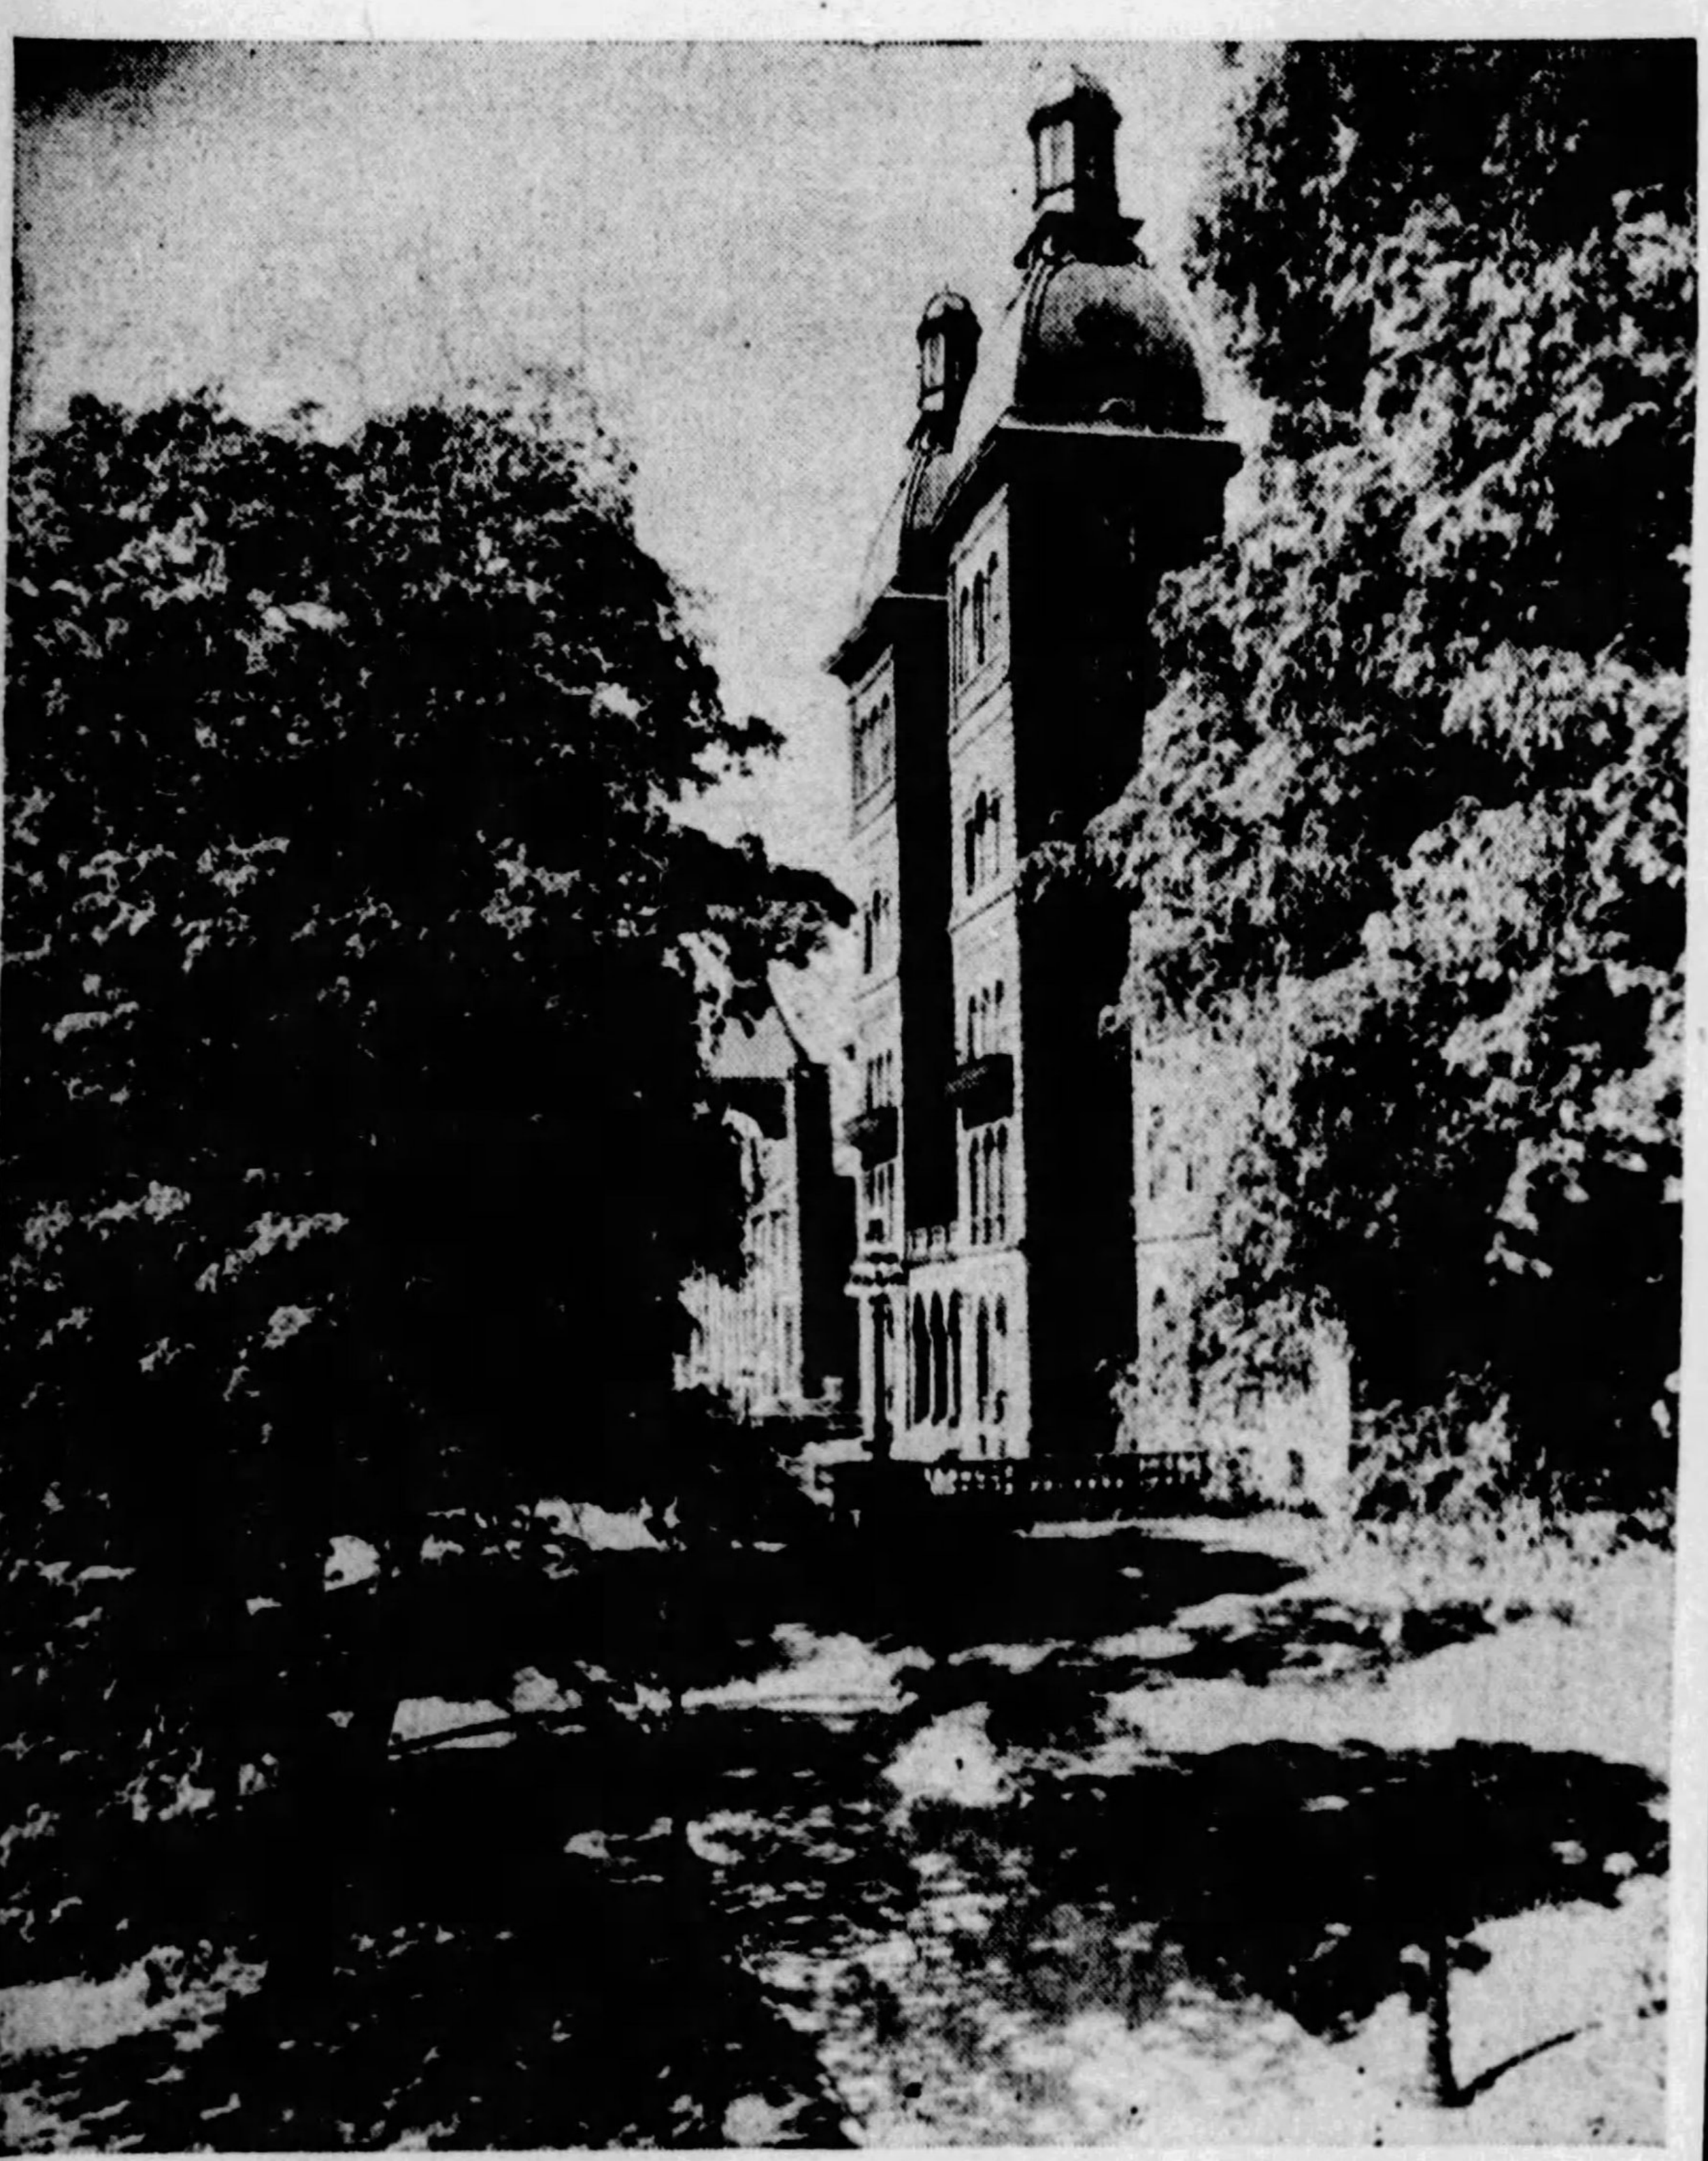
WASHINGTON and JEFFERSON COLLEGE
WASHINGTON, PENNSYLVANIA
A Liberal Arts College offering four years of undergraduate work leading to a Bachelor's degree, and one year of post-graduate work, in residence only, leading to a Master's degree.
FOUNDED 1787



Degrees offered: A. B., B. S., A. M., M. S.

Certificates similar to those issued by Junior Colleges will be granted, if requested, upon the completion of the requirements of the Freshman and Sophomore years.

Senior College and post-graduate courses open only to candidates offering full requirements without conditions. Washington and Jefferson will admit to its Junior class from properly qualified Junior Colleges only those who rank in the upper half of their graduating class.

Hereafter a student enrolled as a junior in Washington and Jefferson College will be required to complete the semester-hour credits required for graduation within 24 months of his junior registration.

A student enrolled as a senior will be required to complete the semester-hour credits required for graduation within 12 months of senior registration.

A student who fails to meet these requirements may petition the faculty in case of personal or family sickness—or other uncontrollable circumstances—and extension of time may be granted by the faculty after thorough investigation by the administration.

Highest standards only recognized in all divisions of the five-year courses.

Extension work on the campus in night courses and summer sessions for college credit and state teacher requirements in Pennsylvania.

Business courses offered with credits in regular course under direction of a Certified Public Accountant with faculty rank.

Freshmen may matriculate and receive class assignments, at the beginning of each semester of the academic year.

PITT CATHEDRAL READY IN 2 YRS.

Foundations for the Cathedral of Learning of the University of Pittsburgh, 350 by 275 feet in longest dimensions, have been laid and steel for the building is going up rapidly. Within a year part of the first three floors would be ready for occupancy, to relieve congestion in the present buildings. Completion of the Cathedral will require two years. Work will be pushed as rapidly as practical, but nothing will be hurried, Chancellor John G. Bowman of the University announces.

"The Cathedral is being built," he stated, "to stand for hundreds of years to come, and buildings like that is not done in a day. We want to build so the city will always be proud and never will have cause to wish that the interior had been designed and arranged some other way."

Seventy-six caisson were sunk 40 feet to hard blue shale rock, small specimens of which tested better than the best concrete, in laying the foundations. This layer exists in a plane almost horizontal under the entire base of the building, and is from 35 to 40 feet thick. That platform of rock, in turn, has good foundation material beneath it.

Erection of steel which is now going up rapidly, was started later than scheduled because of delays in designing it. Engineers' early promises of delivery based upon ordinary experience with high buildings could not be kept, chiefly because the Cathedral's buttresses present unique problems in steel construction, especially as concerns wind pressures and support. All of these have now been met, and while this has been going on many improvements in the interior design of the building have been effected.

Effort has been concentrated, especially, upon the commons room, approximately 100x155 feet, on the first floor of the Cathedral. Hidden bridging has eliminated a number of obstructive columns and provided a surprising amount of clear floor space. To find the most convincing architectural treatment, the chancellor, John Weber, head of the university's department of grounds and the architect, studied large rooms in Boston, Philadelphia, New York and other cities.

"The most beautiful room in America, a room in which a boy simply must take off his hat," is the aim in the commons, Chancellor Bowman explained. "We are now sure we have it, and that every person who has given much or a little to the building of the Cathedral will be proud. It has been a struggle to obtain what satisfies all of us as best. The first drawings, showing a room 18 feet high, were good. But we wanted to see how it would look at all heights, and in all ways Gothic architecture could be handled. To learn this, Mr. Klauder drew the room some 25 times. Now the arches rise close to the ceiling, in the proportions of those of the Cathedral of Notre Dame at Chartres, which critics say has as much inspiration and genius of line as any ever built."

Designing the exterior of the Cathedral is a story of equal patience and perseverance, not yet told. The architect worked three years, adding refinement to refinement in the conception, before there came the Cathedral as finally presented to the public and as now being built.

BOYD STUDENTS EXCEL IN SHORTHAND STUDY

Students in the Boyd Business College, Inc., 535 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, in two or three months' day-school attendance take the same dictation in shorthand with students writing the so-called "standard systems" who have pursued a nine to 12 months' course. In Boyd shorthand there are three rules and 112 symbols, while in other systems there are dozens of rules and hundreds of word signs. On account of its simplicity and speed the Boyd system turns out stenographers who are in demand and are the best paid.

TECH MAINTAINS HIGH STANDARD

In only its twenty-fourth year, the Carnegie Institute of Technology has acquired a reputation not only in this country, but throughout the world as one of America's most important technological institutions. In less than a quarter of a century it has demonstrated by its growth that the progress of an educational institution is less a matter of years than quality of service.

That the Carnegie Institute of Technology is now a national institution has been repeatedly attested in the past few years by the reports of its widespread enrollment. This year the 2,400 day students came from 43 states, the District of Columbia and 13 foreign countries. Approximately 75 per cent of its day students, reports also show, come from outside of Allegheny county. Incidentally, the pre-enrollment reports issued recently indicate that the total enrollment for the new college year will probably exceed 6,743, which was the registration this year exclusive of summer school students.

What is probably one of the chief reasons for the development of Carnegie Institute of Technology is the high scholarship required of its students. It is something of a distinction to be able to enter this institution as a candidate for a degree. It is a much greater distinction to be graduated. The result of this policy of maintaining higher-than-the-average standards of class work has obviously increased rather than retarded the enrollment.

Established primarily as a technological institution, the range of the courses at Carnegie touches nearly every branch of every industry and the fields of art.

COURSES OFFERED

In the College of Engineering, the four-year courses leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science are chemical, civil, commercial, electrical, mechanical, metallurgical and mining engineering. Courses in physics, chemistry and mathematics in preparation for teaching or for research work are offered as well as graduate courses.

The College of Industries, which is a pioneer in its field, gives the Bachelor of Science degree for four-year courses in building construction, works management, printing and industrial education. The aim of these courses is to furnish to industry salesmen, executives and administrative officers, and the student specializes in the underlying science and technique of production, sales and management. Unusually complete shop equipment, combined with frequent visits to the industrial plants of the Pittsburgh district, are great aids in realizing the aims of the institution.

FINE ARTS CO-EDUCATIONAL

The College of Fine Arts, which is co-educational, offers courses leading to the bachelor of arts degree in architecture, painting and decoration, music, drama and sculpture. The college is equipped with a library of the fine arts, a theater, rehearsal, practice, exhibition, lecture and drafting rooms, studios, collections of objects of art, etc.

The Margaret Morrison Carnegie College provides for the education of women for occupations in the home, teaching and the business world. It offers courses leading to the bachelor of science degree in household and costume economics, secretarial studies, general science, library and social work.

KISKI'S DEAN GIVES ADVICE FOR BOYS

Dean James L. Marks, of Kiskiminetas Springs School for Boys, has written a talk to parents in which he makes a plea for boys who require advice and some special training before they are sent to college. He says:

When John has come along to the point when you think he is about ready for college, give him this simple examination in fundamentals:

FOUR QUESTIONS FOR JOHN.

1. "Can you take a regular allowance and come out with a balance at the end of the month?"
2. "Can you retire to a quiet place in the evening and study your lessons without being urged and threatened by your parents?"
3. "Can you get up in the morning without extra pressure and be on time for breakfast and work?"
4. "Can you sit next to a classmate in examination and not look at his paper, when you know you'll flunk if you don't answer a certain question that he has answered on his paper?"

Get acquainted with your son, take him aside and ask him the above questions. If he can't answer "yes" in all honesty to all of these questions, he isn't ready for college!

And in that case it's up to you to sit down and do some hard thinking on the subject, because it's better for John to wait another year than to be catapulted into the twisty, unfamiliar currents of college life before he has learned to swim! Keep him in hand or turn him over to some man in whose ability and influence you have confidence, and give the boy a chance to get a grip on himself before you send him to college. The point Dean Marks makes is that the boy requires training in a school like "Kiski."

LEARNING HERE MAKES PROGRESS

Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania in their educational advantages are second to no other district in the country. Its schools and colleges have a world-wide reputation for their high standard and their graduates are numbered among the leaders of the nation.

Norman Hapgood, editor and diplomat, in a letter to a newspaper friend here, paid this compliment to the work of the educational institutions of Pittsburgh:

"There is nothing more interesting than the relation of mass production to the arts and the various aspects of literature and culture. Pittsburgh has done some fine work in fostering that important side of life and happiness. My guess is that our rich and active cities are going to become more and more the centers of intellectual activity of the fine and varied sort that we associate with the word renaissance."

Mr. Hapgood epitomizes in a brief paragraph the results that have come from the work of Pittsburgh educators and the results that are absorbed from day to day as the community expands and its life becomes more cosmopolitan.

The pioneers who settled Pennsylvania brought the Bible and the spelling book along with the ax and the rifle, and in the first log cabins in the wilderness they established schools for the education of their children. From these "log colleges" have grown today some of the leading institutions of learning in the country, notably Washington and Jefferson College. The University of Pittsburgh is far in its second century, and the Pennsylvania College for Women, Westminster, Allegheny College, Sewickley Academy, Grove City College, Bethany College and others are dignified by age and cherished traditions, while some of the business schools in this district have similarly long records of efficient service.

To keep up with the growing needs, schools founded in later years have been no less successful. The Carnegie Institute of Technology, founded less than 25 years ago, is now one of the leading institutions for engineering and technical training in the country and is equally important in the teaching of the arts—promoting that intellectual activity of which Mr. Hapgood writes. A virile institution, Shady Side Academy, a modern school in every respect, enjoys an ideal location and is winning national fame as a boys' preparatory of the highest rank. Kiskiminetas Springs School, famed "Kiski" of the athletic field, likewise is one of the front-rank preparatory schools.

People of Western Pennsylvania were liberal in their patronage of their pioneer schools and set an example for the generous support which is given today toward the establishment of new institutions or the endowment of those long existent. The campaigns for Washington and Jefferson College, the Cathedral of Learning, University of Pittsburgh and Shady Side Academy are conspicuous instances of the enthusiasm with which entire communities back up in a material way their ideals of intellectual progress.

Just now efforts are being made by the people of Sewickley Valley to raise $350,000 for new buildings for Sewickley Academy, a school that had a proud record in the early days and which is making still greater strides since its reopening three years ago. The alumni of Bethany College, Bethany, W. Va., are seeking $1,000,000 for a general improvement and expansion program and in the work are assisted by several hundred workers composing a committee of ministers and laymen of the Disciples of Christ in the Pittsburgh district.

Pittsburgh is especially fortunate in possessing business colleges and shorthand schools where young men and young women are fitted for practical office work and are given the ground work valuable in developing into efficient executives.

MUSIC HOUSE OFFERS EXTENDED SERVICE

From a force of four employes operating in a small shop, Volkwein Brothers, in 34 years, has grown into one of the leading music houses of Pittsburgh, offering to the public a complete catalog of sheet music, instrument and other phases of the art. The band and orchestra department is the largest of its kind in the state. And the quartet and chorus divisions are equally valuable

The present home of Volkwein Brothers occupies 15,000 square feet of floor space at 632 and 634 Liberty avenue.

NEW COURSE AT DUQUESNE

Everything points to a capacity attendance at Duquesne University this fall. When, six years ago, the student body overflower from the old college building into the newly-erected Canevin Hall, it was thought that the 32 rooms of this fine structure would suffice for the normal growth of the next decade. But preliminary applications for the coming semester indicate a more rapid expansion than that. The opening of the school of education, the college of science and the school of pharmacy are the particular reasons for this increased registration.

The course in education comprises a study of liberal arts combined with an extensive training in education wherein the student is enabled, if he so desires, to major in the subject which he intends to teach. The course, therefore, follows the program prescribed for the bachelor of arts degree through the freshman and sophomore years, branching off into strictly pedagogical work in the junior and senior years.

For the college student of scientific bent who desires to pursue further his study of science along with the cultural studies of the liberal arts, the university year offers a combined science and arts course leading to the degree of bachelor of science. This degree has universal academic recognition. So much prestige has it gained in late years, it is not unlikely that it will become a preresquisite for the professions of medicine, engineering, etc.

FUND OF $350,000 FOR SEWICKLEY ACADEMY

Encouraging progress is being made in the plans for the new Sewickley Academy which is to be erected on the Houston estate, 315 Academy avenue, Sewickley, at an estimated cost of $350,000. A canvass is now being made to raise the funds for this work. The school was re-opened three years ago and has an enrollment of more than 200 pupils. Unlike most private schools, Sewickley Academy is not conducted for profit, but solely for civic betterment and the practical training for the community's youth.

The new building will contain 12 well lighted and spacious class rooms, manual training department, kindergarten, science department, library, administration offices and a gymnasium which may be converted into an auditorium with a seating capacity of 600.

CURRY COLLEGE OPENS ITS SUMMER SCHOOL

To help ambitious young men and young women get a good start in life, to show them how by their own efforts they can become self-reliant, self-supporting, successful men and women is the chief aim of Curry College, Pittsburgh foremost business school. Its graduates are found among the executives of some of the large industritl, financial and mercantile institutions of the city.

The summer school is being organized, new classes starting every Monday morning. J. D. Wallace, secretary, at the college, Penn avenue and Stanwix street, will furnish information regarding the courses and point how students can make their summer vacation period worth from $200 to $300 by spending these golden months in study and preparing for a lucrative position.

HOW TO SAVE 5 MONTHS IN 6 WEEKS

Students who need credits for college entrance or advanced standing, why waste the summer—even working at a nominal salary? Pittsburgh Academy offers those who did not finish high school and those high school graduates who did not take the required subjects, the equivalent of five months work in six weeks. HOLD LINER LOOTING U. S. JOB

NEW YORK, June 25.—(AP.)—The theft of $500,000 from the registered mail carried to England aboard the liner Leviathan today remained a mystery to postal authorities.

Inspectors traced the actual handling of the mail in New York and several clerks were questioned. They announced their quest had been without result.

The inspectors were without official information from either Washington or London, but a cable to the office of the United States Lines here said that Scotland Yard and British postoffice authorities were working on the theory that the mail bags were looted in this country prior to being placed on the ship.

"Almost a thousand men would have to have been in cahoots to commit that crime here successfully," Chief Inspector C. H. Clarahan said, but he ordered the investigation in order that no time might be lost in seeking a solution of the mystery.

The sacks from which the registered mail was taken, looted of its contents and the envelopes returned, was handled in the regular manner here, postal authorities said, and was constantly under guard until placed aboard the Leviathan shortly before she sailed a week ago Saturday.

Kittens' Makes Use of the Grape Trellis to Go on The Wild Parties

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

Emily Day and Kitten are daughters of a worker in the Rossiter factory. Both are prevented by poverty from mingling with the socially elect of the little town. Emily has made an ideal of Kent Rossiter. Mary Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is devoted to her. Mrs. Frances Halden, a wealthy interior decorator, takes an interest in her and tells her the only aristocracy is that of work. She gets a job with Mrs. Halden. Her father dies and Rossiter offers help, which her mother declines. Avis Rossiter's father threatens to disinherit her unless she changes her ways. Great preparations are being made for Avis Rossiter's marriage. Kingdon Coles invites Emily to go to the city to a show. Emily visits the newspaper plant while King writes his review of the play. Her mother reminds her she is as good as promised to Marty. Emily does over the house and hears Kent is coming home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"NO." The only time Frances was cross with her, that turned out to be. They didn't mention him again.

Late in the day Kitten came in. Hair flaming in the sun, green skirts flying, eyes very golden under the dark lashes, she entered like a beam of light, and settled herself under the old square of tapestry which Emily had admired so long ago and which still hung on the wall.

It occurred to Emily now that her sister was more beautiful than the gentle, blending colors over her head.

"Thought you didn't like the poky old shop, Kitten-cat?"

"Well, just dropped in. Nothing special; just wanted to stop."

But Emily saw a watchful look in the yellow eyes and knew her sister wanted something. She said, absently, "Hear about the Wickerts? Everyone's talking."

Red beat up the vivid face; Kitten drew a hard, excited breath. "Oh, tell me, Em, do!"

This was what she wanted then—news. Why was she so eager, though? Sitting on the edge of the chair, hands tight.

"But you don't know him, Kitten? Never even seen him, have you? Emily looked at her with a chill thing of fear in her heart. Too easy for such a lovely youngster to know Nicky Wickert!

"'Course I've seen him, Em. Who hasn't?" And Kitten grinned.

That reassured Emily. But the fear she had known for an instant was like a seed ready to spring up and grow.

She met Coles late in the afternoon. He came for her to the shop and Marty, standing across the street, saw him come.

Marty watched him help her into his car; scowled after them as they drove away. A few miles up the state road Emily glanced blackward and saw Marty following. He had a noisy little flivver that he sometimes rattled about town in, and he chugged along a couple of hundred yards behind their machine.

They stopped at an inn around the bend from the Storm King. And hardly were they seated in the veranda dining room before she heard the flivver clanking into the yard; almost immediately Marty wandered through the door and took care to be given a table facing them.

He didn't appear to see them, yet Emily knew he watched every movement under his drawn-down brows.

It made her nervous at first. Hard to listen to the pleasant things King was saying, to smile and look happy, knowing one watched silently, glowering so.

To do a thing like that! And this was the one her mother called a "fine lad"! Agnes wished her to marry him, give her life into his keeping!

She began to contrast him with the man at her side; Marty's wide shoulders, the fighting jaw, face somber. And King so poised, so affable. She grew angry.

Driving homeward, with the flivver knocking along behind, she told King she would marry him.

"At least I think maybe I will, King!"

"Little golden sweetheart!"

He stopped the car, nearly causing a crash with the flivver, and kissed her, very tenderly.

CHAPTER XXIX.

FREQUENTLY now when Kitten walked down the River Road to meet Ted Lanier, she took Dottie and Flossie Gaines along and two of his friends were with him in the big car.

It was not often, really, that they went on these motor parties. Ted made vague excuses about using the car and Kitten concluded that, as a guest in the Norris home, he had to suit his time to the convenience of the family.

Still they had been meeting once a week or so. The three little girls, so nearly of a size, so much of a type, would start out with their heads close, the black, the brown, the red.

Dancing along, giggling, turning quick, furtive glances toward every machine that passed.

Then the long car would saunter by, glide to the curb, stand with the engine throbbing while they fluttered and giggled again.

Kitten would climb to the front seat beside Ted and the other girls would crowd in with the boys behind, all of them sitting very close.

Then they would go into the country and stop, perhaps, at some roadhouse.

Kitten's joy in this was marred by Ted's attitude. Not only did he refuse to buy her the occasional cocktail, which made the other girls so merry, but once when she lighted a cigaret he snatched it out of her hand and threw it away.

"Be yourself, Redhead. What's the use trying to act tough. You're too good for it."

"Who did you boss last year, fella? I'll do whatever I dam' please!"

His hand closed on her wrist and held with a grip that left it tender for days. "That bar-room talk don't go, my girl. All wet—out." Then, with a softening of the young face. "Ah, Kitten, be nice, won't you? You're too sweet for that stuff. Why, say, I've never seen anything as pretty as you."

She would pout but her eyes were ashamed. Arrogant as she was, this boy had the ability to make her feel cheap. She gave up trying to smoke and her drinking was limited to a few sips from the glasses of the other girls.

But she defied him in the matter of Flossie Gaines.

"Why don't you ditch that one, Kitten? She's not your sort."

"I'll choose my own friends, Mr. Ted Lanier. And if you don't like Floss you can get someone besides me to go riding with."

He had to be content with that.

So Flossie continued to make one of the party and it was through acting upon her lawless suggestions that they many times came very near to disaster.

It was Flossie who first thought of going for a moonlight ride up the St. John Mountains, a wild stretch of hills across the valley from the Ramapos. And even this escapade might have pulled through excepting for the pocket flasks.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

EVERYBODY HELPS

Jim Tully, writer of hobo stories and the like, is back in his Los Angeles home with his wife and everything has been smoothed out. Judge Ben B. Lindsey, he who advocates the companionate marriage; H. L. Mencken, and Rupert Hughes, all helped, it has been told, to patch up the difficulties.

Convention Day by Day

By

O. O. M'INTYRE

HOUSTON, June 25.

THOSE who have read pieces in the papers about the hearty and rubicund hospitality of Texas are not being disappointed. It is just too everything for anything. At the station two red-caps addressed me as "Colonial," and the clerk at the Rice called me "Major"—I love that.

My secretary—I have no secretary, but it is good propaganda—seemed tremendously impressed. It is extraordinary what a nonentity you become in New York and how little you resent it, but I already have a feeling if anyone calls me "Captain" down hereI will cut him dead. I'm that stuck up.

The effort is to make everyone feel at home the moment they step from the train. It is not difficult so far as I'm concerned. Houston has been one of my favorite cities for several years and I feel almost like a home boy. In fact, you can go in any of the child bazaars and inquire for "Old Buckskin" and they'll know who you mean. You know, the rangy New York outlaw who wears spats.

There is an old story of a lonely looking fellow strolling around the lobby of a Houston hotel in chaps, a three-gallon hat ad a six-shooter stripped to each hip. He had a wildcat on a leash and was constantly shoving the head of a rattlesnake back into the pocket of his blue shirt. Someone asked him why he looked so miserable. "They chased all of us sissies out of Austin last night." he sighed.

There is something about Texas that gets under your skin. And I don't mean the chiggers. Anyway, Texas is different from Rhode Island. There are no fancy frills or above the head handshaking. There is a warmth to the welcoming that is elegant. Texas is an empire within itself, covering a larger area than Germany, and you have a feeling Texas is not wrinkling its brow about lasting through the summer. On the streets of Houston you see evidences of a vanishing past—cow punchers booted and spurred, hardy oil riggers, bronzed ranchmen and such—but if you have an idea it is one of those moving picture towns with a Joe's Cafe, Bijou Dream and a Merchant's Hotel, run—don't walk—to your nearest optician. It has one of the finest art galleries in the country, a ship canal, acres of skyscrapers, million dollar mansions, broad avenues, polo fields, huge public parks and all the other trappings which make a metropolis metrop. Now that I've described the town so wonderfully I must tell you about what is going on here.

You've guessed it. The Democratic convention. I wouldn't fool you.

You cannot imagine how exciting it is to be a newspaper man and see the world like this.

Just a week ago I ran across Damon Runyon in Kansas City and I ran across him today in Houston.

And since we met, I have been all the way to New York. I hope whoever gets up conventions will keep on having them. Travel broadens one so. And you would never believe how worldly I have become.

I came within three finger nails of getting a train window open and if I hadn't been obliged to change cars at St. Louis I would have made it. I have also learned not to pull the train rope when you want a porter.

But that is not how I got the discolored eye.

I ran into a suitcase.

Only the newspaper boys and a few tourists have arrived so far.

The big hegira—that'll be found under the h's—from all parts of America, sets in here today.

About the only difference so far between this and the Kansas City party is the tack of bands. I have heard but one band and the bass drummer, incidentally, was putting a lot of feeling into his work.

If one man's enthusiasm can make this convention a success, he had it.

There doesn't seeme to be much talk about who will be nominated.

One might get the idea that everybody knows and it would be foolish to discuss it.

That may not be the case, but so it seems to me.

Houston's motto is: "Not a vacant room." From the finest mansion to the humblest cottage every vacant room will be occupied by this evening. And it looks as though a pleasant time is going to be had by all.

CRANDALL'S DANCERS PASS 350 HOURS

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, June 25.—Ten couples remained today in the "Dance Derby of the Century." At noon they had completed 350 hours' shuffling. Three couples are Pittsburghers, Tommy Nolan and Anna King, Eddie Leonard and Marianne Jacque, and William Bush and Mary Promitis.

All the last three couples to drop out were Pittsburghers. Eddie McGovern and Mae Farland quit the race Saturday. At 7 o'clock Sunday morning Charlie McMillen, the psychologist who had studied every couple on the floor and annoyed them, and his partner, Elsie Schell, refused the call. McMillen "just had to sleep" and Elsie, of course, was out of the race.

MALE RUNS OFF

Last evening at 5:15 Rae McGregor and her lean partner, Bob Schade, began to scrap. Finally, with Rae clutching tightly at his arm, Schade dashed across the slippery floor, vaulted a row of seats and plunged madly into the lobby, where stout Garden police persuaded him to return to his tent. The team was immediately disqualified.

Milton Crandall again loaded his pockets during the Sunday matinee and evening, when more than 22,000 customers paid $1, $2 and $3 to see the weirdly fascinating exhibition. The Garden was cleared of all inhabitants, aside from the newspapermen, contestants, trainers, officials and police at 5 o'clock this morning. This was done to clear out some of the undesirables who have been camping here for several days.

The box office was again opened at 6 o'clock, to catch the night club parties. Promoter Crandall denied the report circulated here that Tommy Nolan and Anna King were given $1,000 guarantee before the marathon started. This story has caused rooters for New York and New Jersey couples to boo little Tommy and his partner from time to time. Crandall said that the only teams to receive any money from him before the contest started were the champions, Eddie Leonard and Marianne Jacque, given $500 and expenses; the Cappellos, from Swissvale, given $250, and Bill Bush and his partner, and Bill's mother, given traveling expenses.

EVICTED OHIO MINERS MOVING INTO BARRACKS

BELLAIRE, O., June 25.—(AP.)—Eighteen families residing in United States Coal Company houses at Bradley, near here, are packing up their possessions today preparatory to moving into four new barracks erected by the United Mine Workers of America. The barracks contain 52 rooms and will be ready for occupancy tomorrow. Adolph Pacifico, vice president of the Eastern Ohio sub-district of the union, said the families averaged about 10 children each.

ALLEGHENY RIVER SWOLLEN IN NORTH

FRANKLIN, Pa., June 25.—Heavy rains over the week-end caused extensive damage in Venango county and sent the Allegheny River up to a near-flood stage here. The stream was filled with debris. At Spartansburg 30 feet of the shore line of Clear Lake was washed away by torrential rain. The river here had receded to 8:7 feet today.

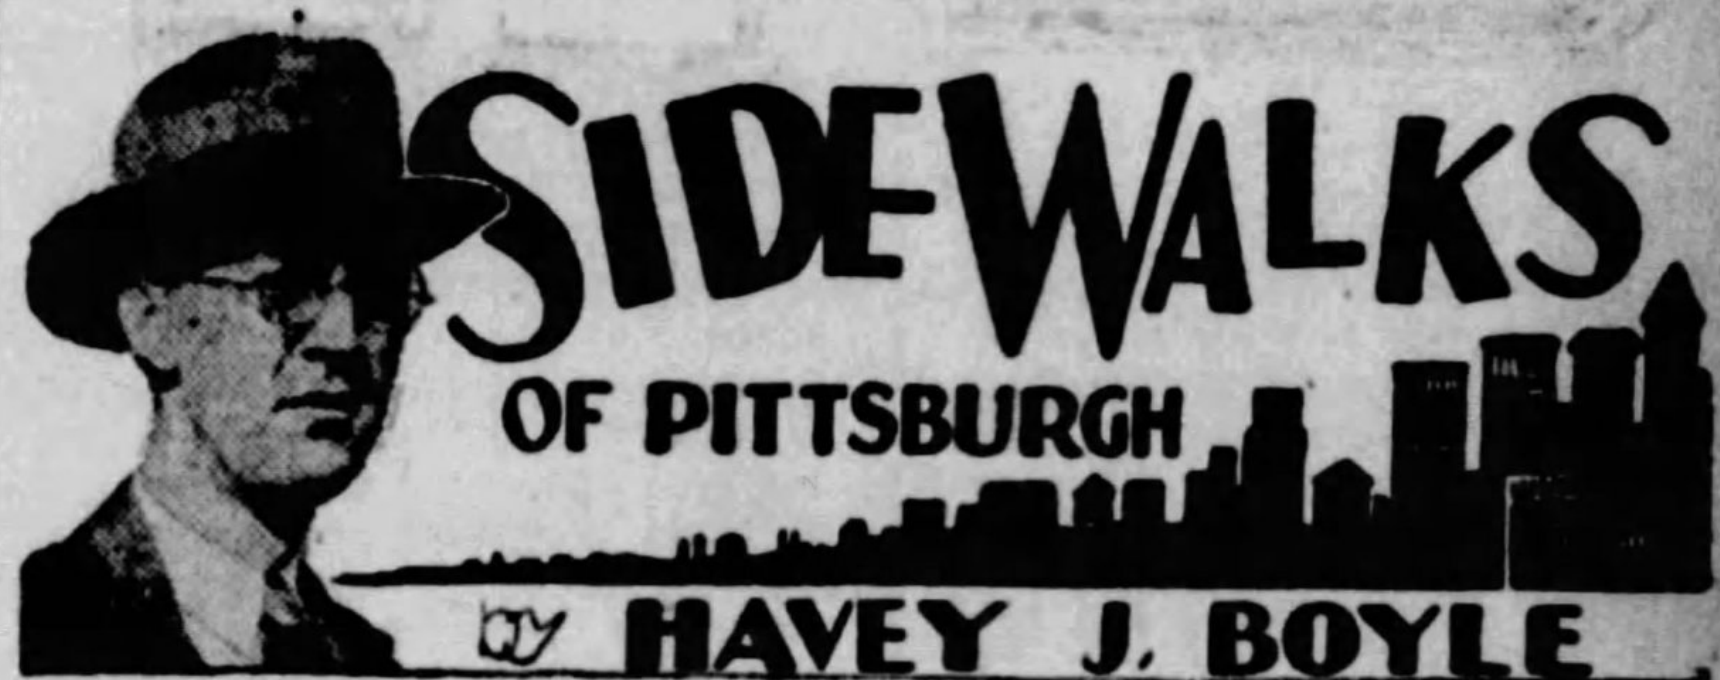
In Family

ALBERT E. LEVEN

MILTON LEVEN

RANK HIGH

It runs, they say, in the family. The Levens, 143 Cape May avenue, Beechview, have Albert, University of Pittsbprgh junior, and Milton, Carnegie Institute of Technology freshman, to tell people about. Albert's just made a perfect score of 18 credits in grade "A" and Milton's standing eighth in a class of 285. Who won that last Pitt-Tech football game?



SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

WHAT is the most widely-known street in Pittsburgh? Is it Smithfield, Wood, or Fifth avenue? These are the streets that would at once pop into the minds of Pittsburghers, but the answer to today's question is: Wylie avenue. Besides the Pittsburghers who know that street as well as they know Smithfield, Wood or Fifth avenue, there are thousands of persons in the United States who could not remember Smithfield or Wood or Fifth, but who associate Wylie avenue and Pittsburgh closely.

An observer suggests that Wylie avenue, in the heart of the colored section of town, is the best-known Negro street in the world. Decatur street in Atlanta is well-known, and Lenox avenue in Harlem is sometimes given notice, and while Chicago has an immense colored population, there is no one street there that carries the prominence in the minds of the public at large as Wylie avenue in Pittsburgh. People, in fact, who never have been in Pittsburgh have head of Wylie avenue and have a mental picture of it. This advertisement has come to Pittsburgh's street mainly, we believe, through the stage folk, who, visiting here, spread the fame of Wylie avenue in other cities they visit.

Now the street will be advertised in a new way through the medium of a song recently written and produced by a talking machine company, a song that is now being window-advertised in the Hill district. Its title is "Wylie Avenue Blues."

MENTION Pittsburgh to out-of-towners and they associate smoke, steel, wealth, expensive hotels, Harry Thaw, good baseball, dull Sundays and Wylie avenue.

Among the colored population of the nation Wylie avenue is as familiar as Broadway is to the country bumpkin. This, partly due to the fact that close to the best, if not the best Negro newspaper in the country, is published in Pittsburgh—the Pittsburgh Courier. From time to time in that paper there are names of colored writers who regularly click in some of the highest-class white magazines in the country. If there is a Negro magazine in the country we have never seen it.

INCIDENTALLY, the vogue for what are known by the intelligentsia as Negro spirituals, is to us boresome stuff. This may be the biggest boost in the world for the spirituals, for in knowing what is good or bad music we take many a stroke to run our score well up into the hundreds. It seems here the words are repetitious to the point of being tiresome and that the music seldom stirs the ear. And, probably, just because they don't appeal to us, we suspect that quite a few people pretend to like them—because the fashion authorities in the music world have pronounced them great stuff.

Back from New York, feeling smaller than ever, what with a reporter telling us how the strain of newspaper work in the large city is a pace that kills. He explained that often he must write a story under awful stress, what with the copyreader, eager to make an edition, yanking his story out of the typewriter, a sentence at a time. The same thing, of course, has been done by many a newspaperman in the provinces, but the way the big-time boy put it made us feel that it must be much more difficult to hit a typewriter feverishly in New York than it is in Pittsburgh or Youngstown. Yet quite a few of the boys in New York used to meet No. 42 to get a load of personals for the next day's edition of a small town paper.

O. K., a very old expression, is still enjoying a great run. No one ever says good-by on the telephone. It's always O. K. One never says: "I'll do that for you." It's always O. K. And "break" is a word that covers every situation. One never asks for a favor. One always must ask for a "break."

Imogene Wilson Getting Good "Break" at Last—Will Appear In New Lon Chaney Photoplay

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright, 1928, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 25.

ONE of those little birds that tell everyone in Mollywood what everyone else is doing, whispered to Imogene Wilson—I mean Mary Nolan—that there was a nice part awaiting her over at the Metro studios. Sure enough, the little bird turned out to be Lon Chaney, and Mary has been borrowed from Universal to enact the leading feminine role in his new picture, "West of Zanzibar."

Mary has shown sufficient preseverance in her campaign to get somewhere in the movies to merit a good break. Despite the fact that she has played several roles, none of them has given her better than half a chance to prove her ability in films. Perhaps, now we shall see her at her best.

Natalie Kingston fooled all her rice-throwing friends by skipping across the border into Mexico, via airplane, and saying "goodby forever" to her single blessedness. The man in the case is George Anderson, one of Los Angeles' rising young realtors. When Natalie completes her present Universal photodrama there will be a brief honeymoon in Honolulu. Hawaii is also the reported goal of Ken Harlan and Marie Prevost, whose new honeymoon renews their wedded bliss after the failure of a "companionate divorce" to convince either that life without the other would be worth living.

Quite a number of directors were actors before they donned puttees and megaphones, and a lesser number have since abandoned the "seats of the mighty" to again strut before the cameras. The latest of these is Frank Reicher, director of a score of Paramount pictures a decade ago. He has been signed to play the husband of the character which Alma Rubens 's scheduled to portray in the John Gilbert vehicle, "Mask of the Devil." Alma is cast as one of the several frail ladies who become enamoured of Jack before his regeneration and the happy ending.

Universal has apparently had its department of psychology doing research work in an endeavor to discover the real reason "Why Girls Walk Home." Whether or not they've found the answer is difficult to say, but in any event a picture of that name will be made by Director Wesley Ruggles with Dorothy Gulliver as the chief protagonist, or walker-home.

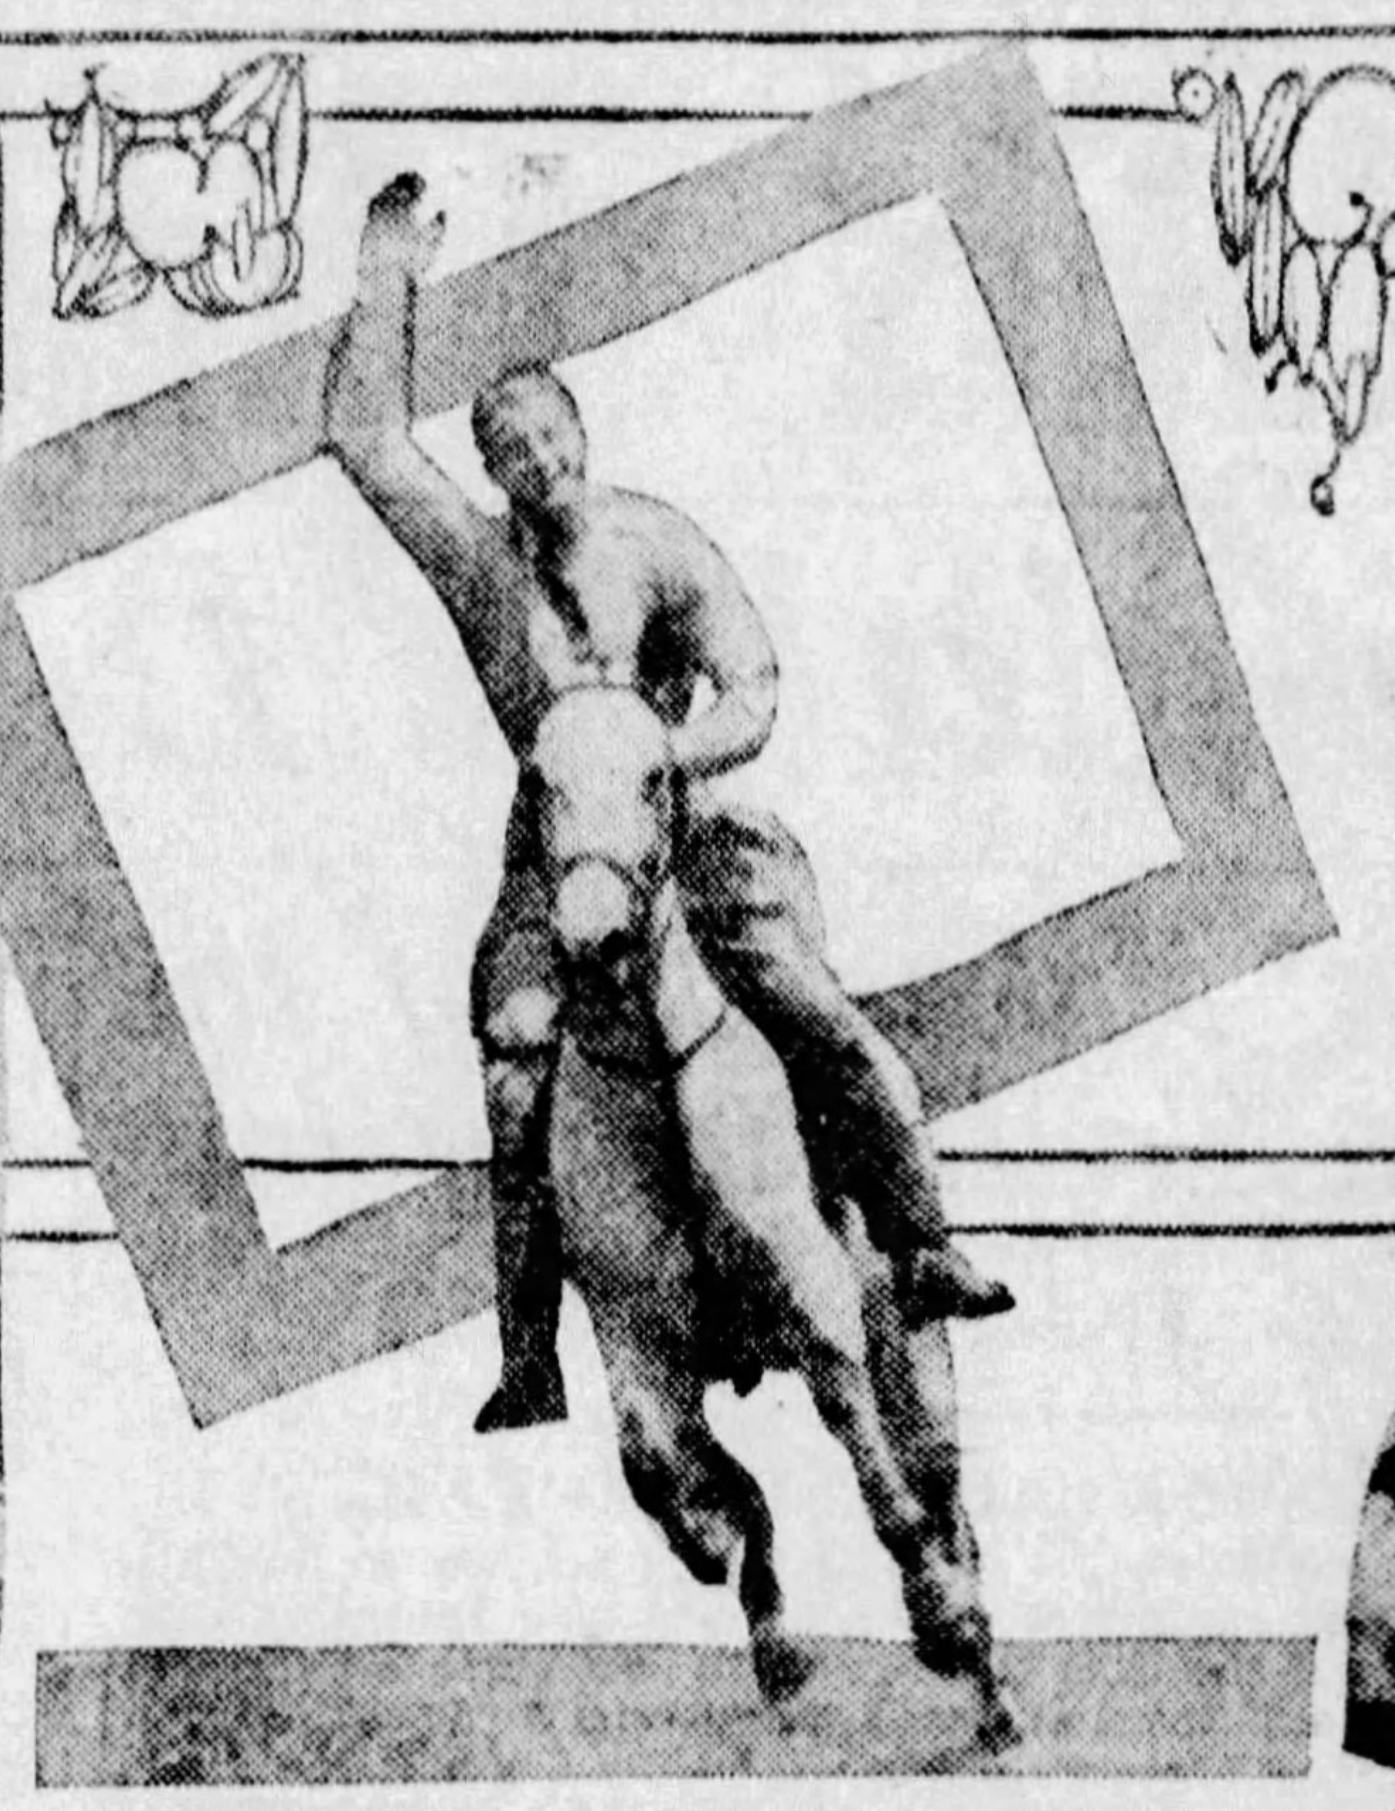
Dorothy, you may recall, is the feminine lead in "The Collegian" series of short subjects, which has met with such universal success for Universal. The pictures are the particular pets of Carl Laemmele, Jr., who is entitled to the credit for the idea and its execution.

It was almost a foregone conclusion that when Universal signed Dr. Paul Fejos it would be to direct a picture in which his knowledge of, and penchant for, futuristic camera stuff could be turned to best advantage. Now comes word that it is planned to have him do a sound picture depicting a romantic yarn of a hundred years hence. The title is "The World Tomorrow." The present estimate indicates that it will cost at least a half-million dollars, probably more before they complete shooting. Dr. Fejos is an amazingly interesting chap, who, among other claims to fame, must be remembered as the director of "Lonesome," the picture with only two in its cast.

FADS AND FANCIES -:- OF SOME PLAYERS -:- IN SILENT DRAMA

Corinne Griffith wears the floppy hat not so much for style as for "period" atmosphere in "The Divine Lady," which is a "special" of Lord Nelson's time.

Billie Dove is a racketeer, but not the kind of a racketeer that calls to mind the underworld lord that bootleg made. No—what we mean is that the fair Billie goes in for tennis. Here you see her going in.



Ralph Forbes is not trying to grab off any of Tom Mix's glory. Ralph is not doing this for film fame but for fun. This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer featured player is an ardent horseman and he doesn't imitate the Prince of Wales, either.

Mary Brian wears an evening wrap made of pieces of gowns worn by film stars of the past and present in famous Paramount pictures. Regal rags can't be wasted.

Stage Players in Film Play of Prize Ring

The two fistic principals of the amusing stage comedy, "Is Zat So?" have been fitted with the roles of the champion and ex-champ in "Celebrity," Pathe's new picture of the prize ring, to be released next fall. Robert Armstrong portrays a fighter who "goes literary" to win fame and "dates," and Jack Perry is his cyclonic but slower-witted opponent.

A queer wrinkle of "Celebrity" is that Bob Armstrong gets his revenge at last for the two years' nightly pummeling handed to him by Perry in "Is Zat So?"

MYSTERY, FUN IN BILLS

Beginning tonight, the attraction for the week in the Pitt will be "The Bride," a mystery comedy drama, with Ann Forrest in the title role, played originally by Peggy Wood.

Next week the George Sharp players in the Pitt will present "The Cradle Snatchers." Brown Mahard of Sewickley, who recently appeared with the company, will have a part in the comedy.

The Davis bill this week includes "The Blue Slickers," musical revue, as the Keith-Albee vaudeville feature, and Florence Vidor, on the screen, in "The Magnificient Flirt."

"Under Cover," by Rol Cooper Megrue, will be the offering of the Nixon players in the Nixon this week, opening tonight. "Under Cover" is a drama of Long Island's smart set, the secret service and trans-Atlantic smuggling.

Beginning Monday night, July 2, the Nixon players will present "The Nervous Wreck," by Owen Davis, a comedy of adventure in the Far West, originally played with the two stars, Taylor Holmes and Vivian Tobin.

OUTINGS TO BE HELD ON HOMER SMITH

Pittsburgh Commandery No. 1, Knights Templar, will hold its annual outing on the Homer Smith tonight, the program including dancing, cards and entertainment. McKinley Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, will have the boat Tuesday night. Chartiers Council, Knights of Columbus, will hold a day trip Tuesday. District Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will be on board Wednesday, and on Thursday the American Federation of Railroad Workers, Lodge No. 12, will hold its annual boat ride. Friday the Allegheny County Boosters' Association, Patriotic Order Sons of America, will hold its annual outing.

The next all-day trip on the Homer Smith will take place July 4. The boat will leave at 8 a. m. and return about midnight, going all the way to Chester, W. Va., and Rock Springs Park.

"REVENGE" HELD UP BY STARS ILLNESS

Production on Dolores Del Rio's photodrama, "Revenge," has been held up because of the illness of the star. While not serious, her indisposition is nevertheless sufficiently annoying to keep her from the set. The doctors agree, however, that she may resume work next week.

School Days for "Gang" During Vacation

Bob McGowan, who supervises all the "Our Gang" comedies, used to be a bold, fearless, flame-fighting fireman. And between checker games he decided to direct motion pictures. He wrote to a company and said he would like to direct. Word came back, "Well, what's stopping you?" The answer is that nothing did, and now he is perhaps the only one on the lot in whom the kids have complete confidence. The youngsters are naturally the butt of many practical jokes. "Farina," especially, took more than his share of the gaff until his trusting nature became more suspicious. The kids all kicked recently because their picture dealt with school life—and this during vacation time.

Vitaphone Films As Road Show Productions

Warner Brothers, who are now well launched into their production activities for the new season's schedule, have begun camera work on two of their road shows with Vitaphone for 1928-29.

Al Jolson has put on his make-up for the first scenes in "The Singing Fool," which is being megaphoned by Lloyd Bacon from Leslie S. Barrows' play. Betty Bronson, who is playing opposite the star, is also working in the preliminary sequences along with Josephine Dunn, Davey Lee, Arthur Housman and Reed Howe.

The second Vitaphone special now occupying the attention of the studio is "The Terror," the first production to be made with sound replacing subtitles. This is based on the play by Edgar Wallace and is being directed by Roy Del Ruth. May McAvoy, Edward Everett Horton and Louise Fazenda head its cast, supported by Alec Francis, Mathew Betz, Holmes Herbert, Otto Hoffman, Joseph Girard and John Miljan.

BUGS BAER Says

ON BOARD THE MAYOR WALKER'S SPECIAL, JUNE 25.

HIS HONOR, the Jimmsy, has donated the first two days of the trip to executive sleep.

His Honor the Jimmsy is conserving his strength for the great Southwest, where men are Democrats. His cold has evaporated. He looks lean and dapper and his eye sparkles like the tail-light of a lightning bug.

Grover Whalen is making all the rear platform speeches, which consist exclusively of that magnificent but terrific interrogation 'What town is this?"

The only politics being discussed is gold and bridge. It seems that Kenneth O'Brien's uncle was the world's greatest bridge player. There was a tear in Kenneth's eye as he said "he died last month and they buried him with simple honors."

Charley Kerrigan, the assistant mayor, is bewildered. He doesn't know just how an assistant mayor assists a mayor to sleep.

Other prominent immigrants are Bill Walsh, Walter Herrick, Peter Brady, Esmond O'Brien, Louella Parsons, Stuart Gibboney and Charley Hand. City Hall is as deserted as a dry-pond. Mike Hylan has a good chance to capture the hall, if he isn't afraid of that big club on the shoulder of civic virtue.

Walsh is commissioner of standards and appeals, Herrick is the duke of parks, but we cannot place Gibboney. We recall him as an old time McAdoo man and author of that ferocious truth "if the South is solid then somebody has done a good vulcanizing job."

The commissioner of rear platforms predicts a short, fast convention at Houston. The temperature is 100 in the shade, but the shade is full of Democrats. So the only compromise candidate we can think of is a sunstroke.

Louella Parsons is the only lady on the train. She sent me up to the mayor's car to find out what the mayor was wearing and I had to come back and tell her nothing. His Honor, the Jimmsy, was taking a shower bath.

He ate breakfast in a green lounging costume which was neutralized by Grover Whalen's Red Russian slippers. Grover looks very lonely and we suspect that his silk hat is in the baggage car ahead.

The mayor's breakfast consisted of two eggs on two pieces of toast, some railroad butter, tea and a cigaret, which he did not smoke blindfolded.

If Jimmsy retains his present health and pepper he will astonish the Southern Democrats who have been working for eight years to return the postoffices, states and government to their original owners.

And if it comes to a compromise candidate, we predict that ocean fliers, channel plungers and Tom Mix's wonder nag will have to go to Washington to greet His Honor, the Jimmsy.

'Our Mary,' Mae, Heflin Have Spotlight

WILL ROGERS

HOUSTON, Tex., June 25.—The following three events have caused more talk at the conventions than Keynoter Fess forgetting his speech: First, Mary Pickford nicking the government for three thousand bucks. Mary is not only our sweetheart, but our best bargain hunter. Then Mae Murray, with no preliminary advance notices, has a baby 16 months old, which was thought an unheard of feat, even in the movies. Then Tom Heflin's platform collapses. That was the first platform crash of the political season. Two others will follow in order.

Yours,

WILL.

P. S.—Houston is as cool and sober as Beverly Hills.

BABY'S THIGH BROKEN; PARENT DON'T KNOW HOW

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 25.—William Neighbors, Jr., aged 10 months, was found to be suffering from a broken thigh and Children's Aid Society representatives are conducting an investigation. He was taken to a hospital for treatment and his mother, Mrs. Nancy Neighbors, said she did not know how the child was injured.

TWO STOLEN IDOLS

MYSTERY! THRILLS! ADVENTURE! LOVE!!!

by FRANK L PACKARD

Bob at Singapore Makes His Plans for Further Action

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley is picked up by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after 30 years to seek vengeance. The Idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. After many adventures Bob and Verna Lyle are both prisoners at Richardson's plantation. The Malay whom Bob had rescued plans Verna's and Bob's escape. Bob, still bound, is carried to safety by the Malay. Bob plans to leave Verna with friends in Kalawa. Bob is determined to find the Idol and starts a search. Bob finds one Idol and discovers it holds a message in cypher. Bob convinces Verna of the true story of the Idols.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"YES," he said, "So Chen-shu, the leader of the Chinamen, told me when he thought he had me at his mercy and thought he was leaving me to go down with the Monotah. Your brother had evidently shadowed the Chinamen to our bungalow, and in the darkness and the fight that followed, managed to get one of the idols away from them. But they, in their turn, had been unable to identify your brother. It was not until the night of the wreck that they were able to do so by means of what Chen-shu called the 'piece of torn garment' that had been left in one of their hands during the fight. It was a man by the name of Won Fu who killed your brother."

He paused again, thrust the idol into his pocket, and produced a cigaret.

"May I smoke?" he asked.

She merely stared at him.

"If what I have said is true," he said quietly, "you can see the danger you would be in if the idol remained in your possession. I do not know what the significance of that cipher is any more than you do; but they know you had the idol when you left the Monotah, for they searched both your brother and myself, and they will go to any length to get it. I have reason to be almost certain that Chen-shu and his followers have found a means of getting back to Singapore, therefore it is not safe for you to go there at present. They must first be made to know that you have not got the idol any more—and even without your permission, I am going to make it my business to see that not the slightest doubt of that fact remains in their minds. I think that is all, Miss Lyle. Ashore here, you will hear the story of Hsi Yan's attack on my uncle's house from dozens of people who could have no reason for telling you anything but the truth, and in due time I hope you will be able to verify from the authorities themselves what I have suggested as the reason and the meaning of the code message your brother received. And you need give yourself no anxiety about your stay here in Kalawa. You will not be taken anywhere against your will. You will meet Mr. and Mrs. Crowley in public, and, safeguarded by the presence of probably the whole population of Kalawa, you will be able to form your own opinion of them. They will come down to the beach; and if, because they are friends of mine, you fear some ulterior purpose on my part or theirs, then you are free to choose for yourself any other of the white residents with whom you would prefer to stay."

She was twisting her hands together now, looking at him from under knitted brows:

"You mean that?"

"Yes," he said.

"And you?" she demanded. "What are you going to do in Singapore?"

"Three things—I hope," he said. "To divert the attention of these devils from you; to make them answer to the last man for the killing of my uncle as I swore to my father I would do; and to bring back proof to you that my hands are clean."

She said nothing, but the color was coming and going rapidly in her face now.

"We will be dropping anchor presently," he said. "I am afraid you have not much packing to do. It has been a miserable trip for you. But if you have any preparations to make before going ashore, I would suggest that you make them now."

"Yes," she said mechanically, and turning, started down the companionway—but halfway to the bottom she paused and faced him slowly. And now her voice choked suddenly as she spoke again. "Either I have treated you more shamefully than any man was ever treated before," she said; "or else you are so crafty and monstrous a fiend that no punishment in this world would ever expiate your sins!"

Taken aback, Bob Kingsley made no answer—and the next instant she had disappeared from sight.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

IT was not a choice or inviting section of Singapore—far from it! And at the moment Bob Kingsley stood in a narrow alleyway so black that he could scarcely see the walls on either side of him though they almost brushed his shoulders.

A grim smile twisted his lips. This was the moment he had planned for, almost from the time he had left Aoru. His hat was going into the ring! Jack Dick's place was but a few steps ahead. Within an hour, if he had any luck, it would be well known in Singapore—in the quarters where he wanted it known—that he was carrying around a certain little ivory idol in his pocket. A sudden, low and savage chuckle replaced the smile. Not quite intact though, that little idol now! He was not fool enough for that! One never knew what might happen! Reposing in the idol's stomach beneath the placid, folded hands there was still a pellet of paper on which were to be found three lines of pen-written letters—but it was not the original cipher. When he had reached Singapore that afternoon his first act had been to go ashore and procure some paper as nearly alike in texture and quality to the original as possible; and thereafter he had returned to the Alita, and, choosing from the alphabet at haphazard, had proproduced a very creditably imitated bit of penmanship. Again he chuckled. The original cipher, quite as meaningless to him as was his own creation, was at the moment carefully and securely hidden in the cabin of the Alita!

His hand, snuggling his revolver, was thrust now into the side pocket of his jacket. Jack Dick's! He had chosen the place for his "broadcasting station," as it were, because it was perhaps the most vicious of its ilk in Singapore, and the most cosmopolitan—if that term could be applied in a restricted sense to the native races. It was a melting pot of Bugis, of Negritoes, of Battas, of Klings, of Malays, of Chinamen—of God knew what! Also, he had chosen it because he was better known to Java Dick than to any of the other unsavory proprietors of like dens who leeched their livelihood from the same depraved sources; and, likewise, Java Dick was better known to him than were any of the man's sordid contemporaries—though he could not say that he knew Java Dick intimately, or knew overmuch about the others, for no one seemed to know Java Dick's detailed history, or how he had even come by his name. The man's origin, racially appeared to have been lost in the obscurity of several generations of mixed and probably questionable matings; but, though the East in him predominated and he looked more like a misshapen brown dwarf than anything else, Java Dick admittedly had white blood, and his English was even Cockney in its accent—though Heaven alone knew how he came by it! In any case, it was through Java Dick, though quite inadvertently, that he, Bob Kingsley, had ever had an entree into the native underworld at all. Java Dick, ostensibly, was a boss washerman. A sign proclaimed that fact in front of Java Dick's establishment. There was no reason to doubt it, and indeed Java Dick's henchmen washed lucratively and well. He, Bob Kingsley, on one of his trips to Singapore, had taken some washing into the place. Java Dick had heard of Black Bob Kingsley, and had not questioned the standard of morals of one who was almost universally credited with having no morals at all. Java Dick had waxed gracious. He, Bob Kingsley, had been taken behind the scenes, and had learned that the business signs of native doors adjoining Java Dick's were not all that they seemed to be, either! And then Java Dick had hinted at large profits that might be made in the opium trade if one had a schooner. The proposal had been, not rudely or indignantly, but smilingly and with some plausible excuse, refused. Why make enemies unnecessarily!

"Well, maybe—eh? Maybe then some other time—eh?" Java Dick had said.

When a Shoe Pinches

When a boot or shoe pinches in any particular part, wring out a cloth in very hot water and lay it over the place (while the boot or shoe in on the foot). This expands the leather, and often gives relief. When wearing rubber footwear, dip the soles of moccasins or boot socks in warm (not hot) paraffin, and the dampness always experienced with rubber footwear will be avoided.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

AT Lillian's oddly hesitant request to talk with Junior alone for a minute, my subconsciousness illumined my memory, and I realized that it was she who had caught her breath when the red-bearded man stopped short at the sight of us and disappeared in the undergrowth. Of course, I realized also the reason for her request. Lillian never forgets a face or figure once she has seen it, and in her secret work for the government she has been brought in contact with many dubious characters whom it has been her business to file away in her memory. That she either had seen this man or some one of whom he strongly reminded her was patent, and knowing her methods of work, I knew that she wished to question Junior about the red-bearded man's appearance and manner of speech while the boy's memory was still fresh.

"Of course," I acquiesced instantly. "Junior, go with Aunt Lillian. But don't let Patsy get away again!"

He made a dive for the frolicking puppy and caught him tightly in his arms.

"He won't get away from me this time," he said stoutly, and I led the way back to the car I had left at the entrance to the woodland path. Marion and Katherine were as silent as I, and I guessed that their relief at finding Junior safe was, like mine, too great for idle speech. But Katie's joy was voluble.

"It was a good thing they did, Katie," I said reprovingly. "He might have been lost if he hadn't come to their house. And the man was bringing him back home."

"Sure!" Katie retorted loftily. "Dot big mans he knows hees fried onions all right, all right. But eef dot oder mans get hees paws on dot babee boy, den you see!"

I made no answer to this sweeping assertion, for I knew by experience how useless it is to try to combat any idea which becomes fixed in Katie's mind. Her use of the term "babee boy" illustrates that peculiarity of hers. Dicky declares that on Junior's wedding day Katie will refer to him as "dot babee."

The next instant, however, Katie's thoughts were effectually diverted from Junior by the clarion call from Marion, who had walked toward the wild raspberry bushes at the entrance to the road and was inspecting them eagerly.

"Oh, Katie, the blackcaps are ripe!" she cried, and my little maid hurried over to her side and judicially ate one of the berries Marion had picked.

"Yah! dot so," she assented. "I have dot Jeem peeck me some dees afternoon, ve have raspberry sherbet for dinner."

"You needn't waste Jim's time having him pick over this bush," Katherine said as she and I joined the impromptu berry-picking expedition. "I'm going to have the first course of my luncheon right here."

"Maybe I no need get luncheon?" Katie rejoined slyly, and indeed by the time Lillian and Junior enthusiastically joined us, it began to look as if her comment would be justified. But Katherine called a halt when she thought Junior had eaten all he should.

"I don't want to set up a hospital ward," the little nurse said, and obediently we left the bushes and climbed into the car.

But all the way back to the farmhouse my curiosity kept prodding me with the question: What had Lillian discovered about the red-bearded man?

How To Be Beautiful

by Maria Jeritza

The Lure of Lovely Hands

WHEN Romeo speaks of the "white wonder of Juliet's hand," we gain through those few words a clear idea of the grace and delicacy and daintiness of his lady.

MARIA JERITZA

Even in these days when women take pride in doing all kinds of rough, hard work, from guiding an airplane to changing the tire of an automobile, from tennis to scrubbing the floor, from running a typewriter to playing a harp, soft, smooth, well-cared-for hands are the rule.

Scrupulous daily care, which soon becomes second nature and not a conscious effort, is the secret of lovely hands. In summer, care of the hands may differ slightly from the measures needed in cold weather. You may prefer a less greasy lotion, for instance, in summer, when the air is less drying and your hands are less liable to chap. In that case you might make up the following formula, or, better still, have it made up by your druggist:

Gum tragacanth, 40 grains; glycerin, one-quarter ounce; boric acid, one-quarter ounce; oil of bergamot, five drops; oil of rose, one drop; oil of lavender, two drops; water enough to make one-half pint.

Always pour a few drops of this delightful lotion into the palm of one hand after washing and drying your hands, then rub it well into both hands and wrists, in the same way that you would lather your hands with soap suds. This should keep them soft and white and refine the skin pores.

Also, the dainty perfume of the lotion will cling to your hands. And most women, even in America, where it is not the custom for a gentleman to kiss a lady's hand, like to feel that their hands are slightly fragrant. It is cooling and refreshing in summer time to pour a little of your favorite toilet water over your hands and wrists.

Protruding veins and enlarged muscles are the bane of many a woman in caring for her hands. I may as well warn you that it requires a couple of months or even more time to overcome this condition, due usually to imperfect circulation, which may have been developing for years.

Use a liberal amount of the lotion I have just described, or else a good muscle oil on your hands, and massage it in with both the kneading and rotary types of massage. The former consists of very gently pinching the flesh of your fingers and hands between your thumb and fingers. The rotary movement is equally simple; rub the second and third fingers over the skin of the opposite fingers and hand in small outward circles. Finally, rest your elbow on a flat surface and, holding your forearm and hand straight up, begin at the finger tips and rub gently downward to your wrists as though fitting on new gloves.

This entire process of washing and drying the hands, applying lotion and massaging them requires but a few moments. If you repeat it several times each day, in the course of the months and years your hands should grow ever more alluringly beautiful.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by HARRY KECK
SPORTS EDITOR

HAVING tried his hand as a professional football player and promoter, following his career as a collegiate football and all-round star and then as a professional baseball player, Jim Thorpe, the Indian, may branch out as a football coach next fall. In a letter to Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, his mentor at Carlisle Indian School, Thorpe indicates he would like to teach the sport. Warner is conducting a coaching school at Wittenberg College, Springfield, O., now and a reunion with his old pupil is planned. Thorpe lives at Marion, O.

JOHNNY CAREY, the Erie puncher, who meets Jack Katkish in the six-round semi-final of Jules Beck's Young Saylor-Phil Scello show at the Duquesne Steel baseball park next Thursday night, has quite an imposing record for a youngster. It embraces 41 knockout victories. He has beaten Luke Carr, of Buffalo; Mickey Solmen, of New Castle; Mickey Fedor, of Alliance, O., and others; knocked out Frankie Murphy, George Kerston, Ray Johnson and Chubby Brown and drawn with Mike Dempsey, Bobby Tracey, Willie Lavin and Bucky Lawless. In Katkish he meets another sweet socker, and, with Katty primed to make up for his one bad fight, that with Jack Zivic, his last time out, the fur should fly. Truth to tell, this battle may put the main event in the background for action.

ONE of the most interesting college publications that comes regularly to this office is "Brunotes," the official monthly of the Brown University Athletic Association. It always is chockful of newsy reading. For instance, from the commencement number, I cull this announcement of general interest in the athletic world:

"Brown and Yale will work on a non-scouting agreement this fall. After some months of consideration of the suggestion from Yale that the gridiron game be played under a non-scouting agreement, the Brown gridiron organization has agreed to give the idea a further trial and the 1928 game will be played under the regulation.

"It may be said that Brown is neither undeniably for or against the idea, and that the Yale game is being played in this manner with a two-fold purpose. The first is the willingness of the Brown gridiron organization and athletic authorities to go further into an innovation that may possess commendable qualities and to that end may deserve further trial, and the second is the desire of the Brown authorities to enter into an agreement with an honored rival of a half century of friendly relations in a plan that the Yale authorities desire to try further.

"Yale has tried the idea through the whole or part of two years, and in that time has found features that they desire to retain. Brown tried the idea only this last season and found little to commend it for further experiment. Realizing, however, that one year could not offer an adequate and final test for such an innovation, the Bruin has agreed to go further into the plan.

"Norman S. Taber, chairman of the Brown Council and D. O. McLaughry, head coach of football, met the Yale athletic and gridiron authorities in New Haven early this month and agreed to play the 1928 game under the non-scouting regulations that were used last fall."

SHOWERS AGAIN HALT PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

A STIFF afternoon shower that lasted for more than an hour and soaked thoroughly a court already moist from morning rains put sudden quietus on Sabbath hostilities in the fortieth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships in progress under P. A. A. auspices on the rectangles of the Pittsburgh Golf Club for the past week.

The downpour caught Champion Byron Baur, Erie luminary, and John O'Loughlin, Winged Head ace, at the very start of what had promised to prove a hectic and well-played semi-final contest for the right to encounter Billy O'Loughlin, diminutive Shady Side Academy captain, for the 1928 district title. A large and colorful gallery scurried for shelter when the deluge commenced. Hopefully the throng lingered about the clubhouse veranda and in cars parked in profusion near the scene of action. But all in vain. Within 20 minutes the turf showed glistening patches of surface damp, and by the time half an hour had dragged by, possibility of further jousting had vanished.

CONTINUES TODAY

Virtually incessant bad weather since the outset of tourney competition has placed the West Penn conclave, particularly the men's doubles division, in a rather difficult position. It is hoped, none the less, to complete the men's singles milling this afternoon on the golf club lot, Baur being billed to continue the fray with John O'Loughlin as soon as the courts are dry enough for play. The survivor of this contest will run afoul Billy O'Loughlin, either later in the afternoon or at 3 p. m. tomorrow, at which latter hour the women's finale will be staged. Men's doubles will be run off as quickly as possible during the week. Entrants in the doubles are requested to communicate with Secretary John M. Stewart of the P. A. A. racquet committee for exact individual data on the dual event.

O'Loughlin won the spin as the rival netmen entered the enclosure. He chose to serve. He outed the first point and suffered a perfect backhand lob to drop safely for love-30. Here Baur outed return of service and O'Loughlin registered a clean passing shot for placement as the Erie star incautiously approached the barrier. Baur outed the next two points for an O'Loughlin game as the heavens unleashed their watery burden, and festivities thereupon terminated for good and all.

RINEHART NOSED OUT

Shortly before his abbreviated seance with Baur, O'Loughlin edged out Marion Rinehart, mighty slasher of Stanton Heights, by a hairline 6-3, 7-5 margin. The match was a holdover from Saturday, the P. A. A. youth having captured the first set and assumed a 3-2 lead in the second when rain intervened to interrupt the procedure. Rinehart began brilliantly when tilting was resumed yesterday, his scintillant forecourt work knotting the count at 5-5 after O'Loughlin had garnered a 5-3 lead. At this juncture, however, the Stantonian lapsed into inaccuracy and blew set and match with a succession of errors, some forced and others not.

Mrs. Dorothy Lewis, Alliance chopper, eliminated Polly Schoyer, Steel City lass, 6-1, 6-3, in a hard-fought women's semi-final earlier in the afternoon. Miss Schoyer boasted the prettier strokes, but Mrs. Lewis refused to be counted out and by dint of wider tournament experience and greater consistency held the better of the argument throughout the tussle. By downing Miss Schoyer, Mrs. Lewis won place with Elizabeth Labarthe, accomplished Californian, in the ladies' final.

SOLON SCORES PROMOTERS

CHICAGO, June 25.—(AP.)—Cutthroat competition between promoters, with an attendant "gouging of the public with prohibitive prices," was scored today by Samuel Luzzo, member of the Illinois Boxing Commission. His statement was prompted by the failure of last Thursday's championship fight between Mickey Walker and Ace Hudkins to show a profit, although nearly 30,000 persons attended.

"Just imagine such a condition as a show drawing in excess of $100,000 and yet showing a loss," Luzzo said.

"Agreements are entered into by certain promoters far beyond good business judgment, in order to outdo their competitors.

"At the next meeting of the State Boxing Commission, I will present a resolution making it unlawful for a promoter to offer more than 50 per cent of the gross receipts, less the state taxes, and no guarantees whatsoever for a windup boxing contest or wrestling bout. If the boxers and wrestlers are displeased with this arrangement, I suggest they go elsewhere to earn their money."

COMPSTONTOPS HAGEN AGAIN

KANSAS CITY, June 25.—(AP.)—Archie Compston, veteran British professional golfer, won another victory over his American rival, Walter Hagen, in the qualifying round of the Mid-American open championship at the Lakewood Country Club yesterday, their first direct clash since Hagen was downed in a special match in Great Britain several months ago. Compston turned in a par 72 for the 18 holes, while Hagen, who was his partner, took 74. Archie was out in 35 and shot the last nine in perfect figures also. Hagen went out in 36, one over par, and was able to do no better coming home.

KITTRIDGE, CATCHER WITH ANSON, DIES

GARY, Ind., June 25.—(AP.)—The body of Malachy Kittridge, catcher of Cap Anson's Chicago "White Stockings" baseball team of the early 90s, left here last night for Bucksport, Me., where burial will take place.

Kittridge, who retired from baseball, about 1897, is survived by his widow, three sisters and three brothers.

KREMER LEADS LOSERS

WHEN Pitcher Ray Kremer of the Pirates was beaten by the Cubs yesterday he earned the rather doubtful distinction of being the first hurler in the major leagues to lose 10 games this season. He has won only four, which is a remarkable slump in form for the erstwhile ace of the Corsairs' staff.

SEWICKLEY DOG SHOW CARDED

The patrons of the sporting dogs have a treat in store for them at the third annual bench show of the Sewickley Kennel Club, on the grounds of the Allegheny Country Club next Saturday. In addition to the large fields of classy setters, pointers, beagles, spaniels and foxhounds nominated, the entries include three crack setters and a pointer which will be exhibited by Charles H. Davis, a showman of national reputation from Bakerstown. Davis will have benched a score of crack dogs of other breeds, but the four bird dogs he will show include Champion Queen Dido, a pointer, who has harvested a wonderful bench record during the last 12 months, winning 28 group ribbons for sporting dogs, seven ribbons for the best in the show and 33 ribbons for the best of breed. Another flashy bird dog he will show is Bergs Beauty, a crack Irish setter, a young dog now within two points of its championship. Another dog to be benched at Sewickley is Champion Riley's Bob, an English setter, and its kennel mate, Woodlawn Nymph, said to be the best pair of dogs owned in Western Pennsylvania.

In addition to the above sporting dogs, Davis will take with him to Sewickley the crack shepherd, Faust Syndicus, imported from Germany last spring, and has never been defeated in an American show. Not only had this dog won many ribbons for the best of breed, but it has quite a collection of ribbons for the best of the working dog group. For the toy class Davis will show the Champion Cy Cy the Flapper, the crack pekingese, owned by Mrs. Frank Graham, of this city.

There will be benched for exhibition only 11 champions from the Van Velser Terrier Farm kennels of Bakerstown, which will include Boston terriers, bull terriers, wire-haired terriers and two champion Irish setters.

This will likely prove the banner outdoor show of the summer season in this state. The dogs will be benched under canvas, assuring shelter and comfort for the dogs and spectators, regardless of the weather. The exhibition will be di-

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

Farrell's Victory Over Jones Well-Earned and Popular, With Bobby Deserving Equal Credit — Kremer Fails Again — Nehf Keeps Up His Fine Come-Back Work.

MUCH as the golf world likes and admires Bobby Jones for his personal qualities as well as skill, Johnny Farrell's victory over him in yesterday's play-off at Chicago for the National Open Championship was nevertheless a very popular one.

Johnny Farrell.

That goes from a personal view point as well as one of a sportsmanship nature, for not only is Farrell a credit to the sport in every way, but he has been plugging along determinedly in the open without ever winning success until yesterday. Besides he was the better man in the play-off, even though by only one stroke. On top of that he is of American birth, a real home bred, is one of the colorful professionals of the game, and in a general sense, fully deserved his 143-to-144 victory.

IN a sense it was shame that there had to be a winner and a loser after such a long and stubbornly-fought battle. There was so little to choose between them at the finish and Jones is entitled to almost as much credit as Farrell.

Both gave a brilliant display of skill, except during the short bad stretch on Saturday and over the entire route they were continually displaying the coolness, balance and courage that are found only in champions.

It adds another remarkable chapter to the old records, beaten only once, when there were two play-offs, that two men could play 108 holes with only one hole difference between them at the finish.

BASEBALL is a most peculiar game for upsetting expectations, and this applies not only to games on the field but to mishaps to players.

Take, for instance, injuries to the pitching hands of hurlers. Some of these injuries at first would appear certain to end the slab days of the veterans, or at least to reduce the effectiveness of the boxmen.

Yet in a number of cases accidents have forced the hurlers to develop new tricks, or that has enabled them to acquire new stuff that made them more effective than at any previous stages of their diamond lives.

Johnny Cooney.

THERE is Bill Burwell of the Buccaneers, at whom local fans got their first look Saturday. The second finger of Burwell's right hand was struck by a bullet in the world war and misshapen as a result, but instead of interfering with Bill's pitching it enables him to throw something on the order of a screw pitch.

Garland Braxton of the Senators, Wilcey Moore of the Yankees, and Joe Bush, former Pirate with the Athletics, declare that accidents to their salary wings forced them to invent new stuff that made them better hurlers.

Johnny Cooney, Boston left-hander, was considered done for all time as pitcher when a piece of bone was chipped from his elbow a couple of years ago. He lost his famous hesitation pitch, but a couple of months ago he began to practice Joe Bush's fork ball. The result is that he has pitched in four games for the Braves this month and in the same game last Saturday worked eight innings after Barnes had been lifted.

REMY KREMER is beginning to look like a forlorn hope. Even when he lost seven out of eight games in a row Pirate rooters did not lose faith in him, believing that it was only a temporary lapse due to grippe effects and later a sore foot, and when the Frenchman won two out of three games prior to yesterday they felt rewarded for their patient waiting.

But the confidence that Kremer was all set at last evidently was misplaced, and yesterday he was as bad as ever and winning the first game of the series in Chicago was only a romp for th Cubs. Even when he won here over the Reds last week Kremer did not appear to have all his old stuff, and if he does not show a complete recovery of form soon his failure is going to shoot a big hole in any chance that may remain for Pittsburgh.

IN STRIKING contrast to the falling off in Kremer's work is the comeback of the pitcher who beat him and held the Bucs to a lone run in the Windy City yesterday.

Art Nehf was first discarded by the Giants last year and then cast upon the junk pile by the Reds, but Joe McCarthy picked him up and he has more than repaid the Cub leaders for giving him another chance. Besides his numerous relief exhibitions he has won five games and lost three. Two of his five victories were shutouts and another came close to being so yesterday.

Art Nehf.

THE postponement of the Godfrey-Risko fight in Brooklyn from last Saturday to Wednesday of this week was the first step toward muddling up the New York fight program. The Tod Morgan-Cannonball Martin bout, for the junior lightweight title, has been set back to July 5 or 6, Armand Emanuel is to take Jimmy Slattery's place against Tommy Loughran Thursday (light-heavyweight title not at stake, though Loughran must weigh in at the class limit of 175 at 2 o'clock),

DAVE ANDERSON   KYLE ANDERSON

Kyle Anderson is the new shortstop and second baseman picked up by the Pirates from the University of Chicago, where he starred on the baseball nine and the football team. He was captain of the diamond aggregation. His father played with Donie Bush, manager of the Pirates, in the minors prior to the ascendency of Bush to the Detroit Tigers, where he starred at shortstop for a number of years. The elder Anderson came to Pittsburgh with his son when the latter reported.

Johnny Beats Jones

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 25.—The perennial runner-up, the lad they said was always a contender, never a champion, was quite no more today. He had become the outstanding runner-down of all competitive golf, a champion who runs down putts from all distances and opposition from all climes and countries. One might even dally with that phrase about the worm turning but, if one did, one would only prove that he didn't see Johnny Farrell, of Quaker Ridge, win the national championship yesterday in a 36-hole play-off with the remarkable Bobby Jones.

There could be no worm in a young man who sinks a seven-foot putt on the home green when a miss would mean another tie and another play-off and maybe just another defeat for him with victory so close.

WINS BY ONE STROKE

Farrell fought his way to ultimate success against the greatest golfer of all ages, winning by exactly one stroke, with medal rounds of 70 and 73 for a total of 143 against Jones' cards of 73 and 71 for 144. Their 72-hole journey in the regular championship, concluded on Saturday, ended in a dead heat at 294 strokes, with the greatest field ever assembled trailing in their wake—Hagen, the British champion; Compston and Boomer, the greatest abroad, and the field of American professionals, which tacitly means the best there is.

Farrell virtually was considered out of the competition when he took a 77 on the first round, but gameness had its reward when, on the final day everyone blew except Farrell and his rounds of 71 and 72 earned him his chance yesterday.

Johnny was shaky when he started in the play-off, and he felt almost no better when Jones gained a stroke with a birdie at the first hole. But Johnny kept trying, and Jones was not quite the precise automation of other rounds and other years.

Farrell went a stroke ahead at the third, gained another with a birdie at the sixth, lost both at the next two and got one of them back to be ahead at the turn. He made it two strokes lead at the tenth, then it was one stroke at the eleventh and none at all again at the fourteenth.

Farrell then shot four birdies in a row, almost a championship record, getting a 12-foot putt at the fifteenth, a 20-footer at the sixteenth, a stone dead approach at the next and a 20-footer at the home hole. At the fifteenth Bobby got a birdie 4, but otherwise he had no reply to this kind of scoring. He was three strokes down at lunch.

He got two of them back at the first hole in the afternoon and the other was wiped out at the second. All square again, and if you think a thing like that is encouraging to the man who loses these strokes, you just don't know your crab apples.

But, nothing daunted, our hero came back to gain two strokes at the next hole. He had lost both by the time he reached the eighth. Then he gained them back again at the ninth. I suspect that Jones

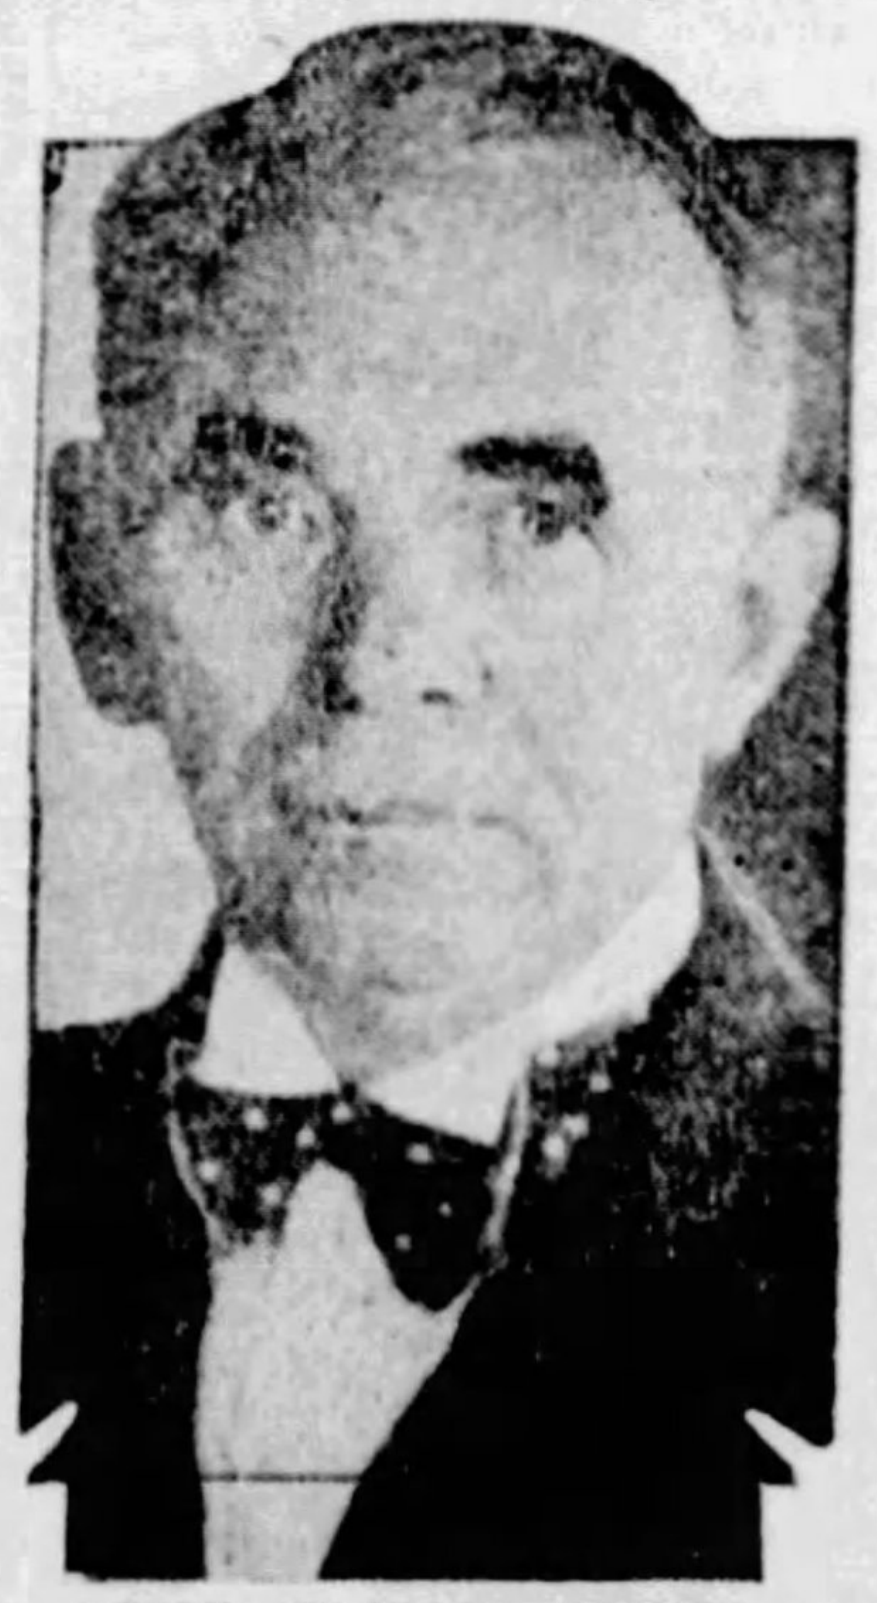
C. of C. Counsel Indorses Sun-Tele Tourney

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER

"I KNOW of no more wholesome event in the entire amateur sporting world than the Sun-Telegraph's West Penn amateur golf tournament for the Hearst trophy.

"I have participated in and made a study of many sports and pastimes, but find that none of them develops a finer spirit of healthy competition and promotes a finer set of companionships and fellowships, than the game of golf.

"This tournament will have much to do with teaching these boys self-reliance, giving them confidence and educating them in the art of dealing fairly with all those with whom they come in contact in the battle of life."



JAMES FRANCIS BURKE

That is the way the Hon. James Francis Burke, general counsel of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh, former general counsel for the United States Golf Association, and present member of the U. S. G. A.'s estimable rules committee, feels about the junior tournament for amateurs the Sun-Telegraph is going to stage on the Schenley Park municipal golf links, Thursday, July 12. He adds his indorsement to that of many other nationally-known men who are qualified to express their opinion through years of experience and contact with the game of golf.

New Buc And His Dad

ANOTHER BARGAIN BILL ON TAP

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Rain today prevented the second game of the Pirates' series with the Cubs here, and, as a result, the clubs will hook up in a doubleheader tomorrow.

The Bruins won the inaugural yesterday, 8 to 1, with Hack Wilson and Gabby Hartnett pounding out homers early in the fray.

Fred Fussell, the lefthander, was slated to go to the mound for the Bucs today and will get the call in one of tomorrow's battles. Percy Jones is scheduled to hook up with him.

The opening game in the West was far from auspicious from the Pirate standpoint. The Bears clawed Remy Kremer right well in the early innings, Joe Dawson relieving him in the third on top of a three-run homer off the bat of Hartnett. Wilson hit for the distance in the second round. It was No. 14 for Hack, who won't give up his home run honors to Jim Bottomley without a struggle.

Art Nehf, who should know better, gave the Buccos a fine trimming all the way. We had to get a substitute into action before we could get a tally. Eddie Mulligan batted for Dawson at the start of the eighth and the clean hit Eddie planted in left was the signal for a little flurry which ended in a run. Brother Paul drove over the marker with two out, Lloyd also injecting a single into the round.

KREMER CRACKS

Kremer saw his mates crack in the third and he followed suit. Sparky Adams and Pie Traynor wobbled in the inning and eventually the home boys were running wild across the plate. Hartnett's productive homer was the final clout of an inning that produced six tallies and removed the game from the doubtful stage.

If the Pirates drew one iota of comfort from their contest with the Cubs, it must have come from the appearance on the mound of Lee Meadows, who actually made his season's debut in the eighth inning. Lee has been out with a sore arm, his performances being confined to exhibition games. The spectacled vet worked only one inning and, while he had his customary actions, he was not so sure of himself, the Cubs scoring a tally in the eighth.

The whole game was played on a muddy field. Rain fell heavily

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., June 25.—Leo Rist, a pitcher, has received instructions from Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Boston Braves, to report at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, on July 14, for a tryout. Rist made a name for himself while in the United States Army, pitching at Corpus Christi, Tex.

REDS' CATCHING STAR

VAL PICINICH

Picinich is one of the mainstays of the Cincinnati Reds in their fight to remain around the top in the National League race. He came up to the major leagues with the Philadelphia Athletics in 1916, and after starring for a few seasons, was sent back to the minors, with Atlanta in the Southern Association. He was picked up by Washington in 1918 and remained with the Senators until he was shipped to Boston in 1923. He was discarded by the American League in February of 1926, when the Reds obtained him by the waiver route, and has flashed such a fine return to form in Cincinnati that he has beaten Bubbles Hargrave out of the job as the first-string receiver for Manager Jack Hendricks. Picinich is among the five leading batters in the National League with an average of .364.

50 Communities in Sun-Tele Tourney

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

THERE are just exactly 50 communities, cities and boroughs, represented in the first annual Sun-Telegraph West Penn amateur junior golf tournament for the William Randolph Hearst Trophy, which is to be played over the good municipal links in Schenley Park, Thursday, July 12, at this writing. And it appears that each day another new city or town is heard from.

Not only are the cities seemingly vieing with each other for the right to place the most boys in the tourney, but high schools and grade schools also are having a merry race of it. A few military academy and prep school lads also have been listed, but not as many as we expected.

With the entry list mighty close to the 200 mark, it appears that the boys are going to try and put it above the 300 mark before this week is out, which would be a mighty fine thing. The entries do not close until Monday, July 9, but, just the same, it is a lot better to get the entry blank and picture of yourself in as soon as you can, in order to avoid the last-minute rush.

This tournament is open to all boys 18 years of age and under not attending a school of education above high school grades, who are amateurs as defined by the United States Golf Association—if you have not accepted money for caddying after your sixteenth birthday you are eligible, or if you are still caddying and have not attained your sixteenth birthday, you also are welcome.

There will be two classes, the junior class, for boys 15 to 18, and the sub-junior class, for boys 14 and under. The low gross score player in either class—play will be at 18 holes, medal—will be the winner of the Hearst award, although a number of medals and other suitable prizes also are to be given winners in each division.

There is no entry fee whatsoever; everything is free. Get in this tournament now! The Sun-Telegraph

SANDLOT BASEBALL

by TOM BIRKS

ALL of the three leading sandlot games in the Pittsburgh district finished rather suddenly yesterday when a heavy rain storm stopped activities. The largest crowd of the season was at Sullivan field to see the Beaver Falls Elks of the O. & P. League tangle with St. Johns. When the seventh inning was reached, the score was 12 to 3 in favor of the River team.

W. O. W. upset the dope by leading the Duquesne Steel nine, 2 to 1; that game also reverting back to the seventh frame. And the remaining game found Pleasant Valley on the short end of a 4-to-3 score, with the Otto Jordans at Jordan field in the fourth inning when that finished.

YOUNG BURKE, the Homewood boy, late of St. Vincent's, was playing short for St. Johns. In the fourth inning a bad bounder hit him in the face and until that time St. Johns had been very much in the game. It is possible that all of his teeth are missing. After that injury, St. Johns' went to pieces. Carson pitched a nice game, but the support was ragged. Goldberg put on his usual burlesque, which did not appeal to the fans.

OTEY beat Andrews, a left-hander, in the W. O. W. game and it seems as though it will take a good club to stop the McKees Rocks star. Of course, Otey might have been beaten had the game went the limit, but there is a chance that the home boys might have got to Andrews.

THE J. L. Thomas club will meet Reliance Life in a league game this evening at Dean field. And tomorrow evening the Insurance boys will meet St. Johns in a benefit game for Brown at Sullivan field. This also is a league game, the Reliance boys consenting to transfer to St. Johns' for the benefit.

JIMMY SMITH club will be the attraction at Stowe tomorrow evening. Stowe is out to win the first half of the city loop and, now that the ever popular Pop Geer is at the helm of the City Leaguers, sandlot baseball is due for a boom around the Rox loop.

Geer without a doubt is one of the most colorful managers ever to pilot a team around Pittsburgh, and it was confidently thought Geer would be out of retirement before the season progressed very far.

THE County League is making a big effort this week to get its postponed games out of the way. At noon today there will be a meeting of the managers of the Allegheny County League in the president's office to talk over the postponement problem. The first half schedule finishes next Tuesday evening, and the playing of games from the first half will hardly be sanctioned after the second half starts.

BILL AMOS, Wash-Jeff star, and Big Man McKinley show their wares with the Gunners. Amos hit a home run on Saturday, but Turner speaks highly of Ostander, who was with Fairmont last season. Offers to get the Finleyville man away from home, however, are being passed up this season.

HOW BASEBALL'S STARS TWINKLED YESTERDAY

Babe Ruth—Hit his twenty-eighth home run of the year, scored two runs in four times at bat.

Ty Cobb—Hit a triple and two singles in four times at bat and scored one run.

Tris Speaker was idle.

Frankie Frisch—Hit a triple and a single, scored one run and batted in one run in five times at bat.

Lou Gehrig—Did not get a safe blow in four times at bat.

Harry Heilmann—Got a home run and batted in three runs in four times at bat.

Paul Waner—Got two singles and batted in one run in four times at bat.

TILDEN, LOTT IN EASY WINS

WIMBLEDON, England, June 25.—(AP.)—Big Bill Tilden opened his attempted comeback on the tennis courts of Wimbledon today with a smashing victory in the first round of the Wimbledon championships over M. V. Summerson, youthful English player, 6-0, 6-1, 6-0.

John Hennessey, young American Davis Cup star, also swept through to an easy victory, defeating the English player, W. Mather, 6-1, 6-0, 6-2.

Not behind their American friends, the French Davis Cup stars, Rene LaCoste and Henri Cochet, won their opening matches, LaCoste eliminating H. L. Walcott, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2, while Cochet eliminated Mohammed Sleem, Indian ranking player, 6-2, 8-6, 6-2.

George Lott, member of the American Davis Cup team, also had an easy time winning his opening match, defeating F. Crosbie, 6-2, 6-0, 6-0.

HELEN WILLS IDLE

Helen Wills and most of the 79 aspirants to her title as queen of Wimbledon were in the competitors' grandstand. Their turn comes tomorrow. All the time of the opening day was needed to reduce the 128 men competitors in the championships to a more sizeable number.

L. A. Godfree, the British veteran, was eliminated by Ronald Boyd, Argentine player, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

Another straight-set winner was the Italian ace, Baron H. L. De Morpurgo, who defeated W. L. Breese, 6-2, 9-7, 6-1, in a first-round match. The baron is rated with Tilden and the French as a contender for the championship.

PATTERSON EXTENDED

Gerald Patterson, Australian veteran, had a hard time defeating F. R. L. Crawford, Anglo-Indian star, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Another country was heard from when Cattaruzza of Argentina scored in straight sets over R. E. Worthington, 6-1, 7-5, 6-2.

FATHERS-SONS BEGIN PLAY

A large field started play this morning in the annual Fathers and Sons golf championship, over the beautiful links of the Allegheny Country Club. George Wittmer, Jr., and his son, George III, and Dr. W. B. and William Ray, all of the Wildwood Country Club, were the first to tee off, shortly after 9:30 o'clock.

J. B. and J. W. Crookston of Stanton Heights again are defending their title.

The Sales Managers' Association is holding a one-day tournament at the Pittsburgh Field Club today.

and it is now said to be doubtful if the Mickey Walker-Leo Lomski affair booked for July 4 will take place at all.

It is said that Walker has withdrawn from the contest and rumor says that plans are under way for matching Walker and Loughran for the light-heavyweight title.

THERE have been one-armed pitchers, such as Hugh Daly and George England, the present Pittsburgh magistrate, but the outstanding man among all pitchers for turning an injury to his advantage was Mordecai (Three-Fingered) Brown, who starred with the Cubs from 1904 to 1912, inclusive, and who was one of the greatest pitchers of his time, only the presence of Christy Mathewson keeping Brown from being recognized everywhere as the best pitcher in the country.

THE longest record of the season for consecutive victories by a pitcher in the major leagues was interrupted Saturday when Wait Hoyt, Miller Huggins' mainstay, went down to his second defeat of the season in one end of the double-header with the Redsox.

Hoyt had won eight games in succession, and his only other defeat of the season was suffered at the hands of Sam Jones of Washington on May 2, Waite being knocked out in the fifth inning.

FROM that time until Saturday Hoyt was invincible and he won more games in a row than any other pitcher in the league has won this season. Benton and Pipgras won seven in succession, but Hoyt alone succeeded in piling up a total of eight.

A feature of Hoyt's string was that while he was winning eight straight for Miller Huggins and his Yankees he defeated every other club in the league at least once and downed Detroit twice.

Local Bowler Rolls 300 Score

Harry Wiegmann, employed by the H. Koppers Co., with offices in the Union Trust Building, is the latest local bowler to roll a perfect score. Bowling doubles in duckpins on the Davis alleys Saturday afternoon, Wiegmann, who was paired with Johnny Butler, of Mount Oliver, registered 12 successive strikes.

Besides bowling in the Koppers League, Wiegmann is one of the stars in the Central Pittsburgh loop, an organization that rivals the South Pittsburgh League.

is accusing himself of having lost the title on this hole. In fact, he took nothing better than a 5 here all week. This time, he not only came weakly out of a trap, but missed a 15-inch putt. He, too, might have been forgiven for taking laudanum here. Instead he merely took a brace.

That is to say, he shot three straight 5's. Jones was one stroke up straight 5's. ones was on stroke up again. It looked like the emergency exit for John.

His rejoinder was to almost get a hole in one at the short thirteenth and the score was even again. They halved the next two and then Jones over-played the short sixteenth and the stroke that decided the championship was in Farrell's bag. But he still had to protect it.

Both missed their eighteenth green with their seconds. Farrell's next was seven feet away. Jones replied by chipping absolutely dead. Johnny had to sink his putt to escape another tie. He got down over the thing and the movie cameras disturbed him. Usually fatal, that. Then, in a breathless hush, he eased the ball into the cup and it was all over.

PIRATES

about noon and up to game time there were intermitttent showers. The field was in such a shape there was no hitting session for either club. Apparently the fans figured the contest would be postponed, as less than 15,000 turned out.

Dick Bartell continued at shortstop owing to the sickness of Glenn Wright, but the Missourian is expected to go back to his post this afternoon.

RITTS SCORES ACE ON WILDWOOD LINKS

Wildwood Country Club, newest of Western Pennsylvania's golf courses, had its first hole in one registered yesterday when Fred M. Ritts, of the Foxburg Country Club, scored an ace on the 160-yard seventeenth hole. His father and two brothers were playing with him at the time.

WYATT MAKES OLYMPIC TEAM

DETROIT, June 25.—(AP.)—A team of 25 swimmers and divers, headed by Johnny Weismuller, peer of American aquatic champions, was selected here last night to represent the United States in the Olympic games. The list shows Weismuller nominated for three events, the 100 meter free style, relay and water polo. Other members of the swimming team are, George Kojac of the New York Boys Club, who set a new world backstroke record Saturday; Walter Laufer, of Chicago; Paul Samson, former Michigan captain, now representing the Illinois Athletic Club; Paul Wyatt, of Uniontown, Pa.; Clarence Crabbe, of Honolulu; Raymond Ruddy, of the New York A. C.; Harry Glancy, of the Penn Athletic Club; Thomas Blankenberg, of the Athens Athletic Club, Oakland, Cal., and Austin Clapp, of the Hollywood Athletic Club.

The diving team of four is headed by Pete des Jardines, of Miami, Fla., and includes Mickey Reilly, of the Los Angeles A. C.; Harold Smith, of the Los Angeles A. C., and Walter Colbath, of Northwestern University.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

NAPOLEON'S historic retreat from Moscow will be the theme of the musical presentation of the General Motors' program over WCAE—and other NBC System stations—at 9:30 o'clock tonight. It will feature Tschaikowsky's "Overture Eighteen Twelve."

Another network feature over WCAE will be the O'Cedar hour at 8 o'clock. This will feature Charles King, star comedian in Lew Fields' "Present Arms." King previously appeared in "Hit the Deck" and other musical show successes. There will be music by a male quartet.

Among KDKA's NBC features will be a program by the Tango Orchestra at 9:30 o'clock and Works-of-Great-Composers at 10 o'clock. Two Spanish vocalists—Raquel Nieto, soprano, and Jose Moriche, tenor—will be featured with the Tango Orchestra. Compositions of Robert Schumann will be offered during the Works-of-Great-Composers' presentation. Genia Fonariova, mezzo-soprano; Mathilde Harding, pianist, and Irving Jackson, baritone, will be heard.

The Merrymakers, a program which met with favor when it was presented some time ago, again will be heard through 17 associated stations of the Columbia system, including WJAS, at 10:30 o'clock. This program, which consists of lively semi-classical compositions, will be presented by a large symphony orchestra, mixed and male quartets, and vocal and instrumental soloists.

Improvements Promote Progress

EVERY project in the Allegheny County Bond Issue to be voted on June 26 is absolutely essential to the welfare and development of this community. The value of each improvement is enhanced by the construction of them all. Roads and Boulevards require Bridges and Bridges require Roads and Boulevards. Every voter who is interested in his home town and county keeping pace with other progressive communities should vote his ticket straight and support every project listed in the Bond Issue.

YES! The Allegheny County Bond Issue Deserves Your Support

IF PROGRESS in Allegheny County's development is to continue, every improvement listed in the bond issue to be voted upon tomorrow should be authorized by the voters of the county. Nothing stimulates civic progress better than wise investment in public improvements.

The Road, Boulevard, Bridge, Town Hall, Airport, and Park projects all have been given thorough study before inclusion in the bond issue. All are necessary and vital to further county development. All have received the endorsement of leading civic and business organizations in the county. Furthermore, the competent and experienced personnel of the Allegheny County Department of Public Works is a sufficient guarantee that construction will be given proper and efficient supervision.

The Pittsburgh Motor Club wishes, therefore, to add its endorsement to these items of the bond issue and to urge every citizen who is interested in the welfare and development of his county to go to the polls tomorrow and vote "Yes."

GIRL NABBED IN STORE FRAUDS

Representing herself to be the daughter of a former prominent steel man, Hannah Lawrence, 24, of 4526 Liberty avenue, is alleged to have purchased finery at three downtown stores before her scheme was discovered. Today in Morals Court she was held for further investigation. All the goods, amounting to about $200, were recovered. One store lost a $25 permanent wave which Miss Lawrence is said to have had charged.

Miss Lawrence signed the name of a society girl to the charge slip, detectives alleged.

PULMOTOR USED BUT CHILD DIES

To save the life of a new-born girl in the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Yost, 169 Monroe avenue, yesterday, police from the North Side station were summoned to operate a pulmotor.

The baby was born, barely alive. Dr. Alfred McElroy decided on heroic measures and asked the police to lend their pulmotor. Wagonmen William Walsh and Thomas English, hastening to the rescue, managed to keep the child alive 45 minutes then the infant collapsed and died.

PLUNGES INTO FLAMING OVEN

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 25.—Facing certain death when he fell into a burning coke oven early today at the Phillips plant of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, Elmer E. Wilson, 40, night fireman, saved himself by climbing out of the inferno. He had plunged into the flaming pit up to his shoulders, but had strength enough to raise himself out of the opening. Clothing ablaze, he staggered to the boiler room where his garb was stripped from him. He is in Uniontown Hospital with slight chance to recover.

POLICEMAN ATTACKED, CLUBS GANG WITH GUN

Attacked by eight men whom he had ordered to disperse, at Itasco and West General Robinson streets at 4 o'clock this morning, Patrolman William Dorsey used his revolver as a club after his mace and handy billy were taken from him. He felled Boyd Fennell, 33, of 405 West General Robinson street, and put Fennell's companions to flight. Fennell was taken to Allegheny General Hospital to have several cuts treated. Today Magistrate E. M. Hough in North Side Police Station, fined Fennell $10.

LABOR CAMP SLAYER SOUGHT BY SLEUTHS

County detectives today are searching for Mike Bolack, of the McKelvey-Hine Company labor camp in North Fayette township, who is accused of having fatally stabbed Steve Petrovich, 45, of Fayette township, during an argument Saturday night. According to Detectives W. O. Alexander and John Geisler, who are investigating the case, Petrovich argued with Bolach who had accused him of stealing the purse of Tom Stonavich, a neighbor.

HURLED FROM MACHINE, WAYNESBURG TOT SAFE

WAYNESBURG, Pa., June 25.—Lady Luck rode with Virginia Williams, 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Williams, of Waynesburg, last night. Thrown from the front seat of an automobile, the child alighted on her head on the concrete roadway and was picked up, only slightly injured, barely in time to save her from being run over by an approaching machine. She was brought to Waynesburg by a passing motorist, her father being unable to drive on account of shock.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, June 25.—(AP.)—The curb market presented a curious picture of many small losses and a few wide gains in early trading today. The general trend of prices was downward, with trading light and the market dull.

Interest centered in Bancitaly, which opened about a point lower at 103⅛. It moved up to 104⅞, on reports that a syndicate had been organized to interest itself in the stock and had placed orders for more than 50,000 shares in two houses at a premium above $100 a share. Later the issue eased to 103 and then recovered about a point.

Strong spots included Checker Cab, Noranda Mines and Sherwin Williams, all of which reached new peaks for the year on fairly heavy buying. Melville Shoe extended its recent gains 3 points more on buying influenced by announcement of plans for recapitalization through which the common stock will be split on a four-for-one basis, the 8 per cent preferred retired and new 6 per cent preferred issued. Newmont Mines, General Ice Cream, Marmon Motor, Southern Store A and Canadian Marconi also advanced.

Columbia Graphaphone, Kalamazoo Stove, Lehigh Coal and Navigation, Safe-T-Stat, Tubize and others showed losses of 1 to 25 points.

Utilities were neglected and weak.

Burman Oil, which reached a new year's high at 23½, was an exception in the generally heavy oil group. Galena Signal new preferred, a feature of last week's advance, slumped about 8 points.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Market, giving all stocks and bonds traded, 000 omitted in sales column in bond list:

Crowds and the Bond Issue

THE Town Hall at Detroit has the Air Show . . . The Town Hall at Kansas City had the Republican National Convention . . . The Town Hall at Houston has the Democratic National Convention . . . The Town Hall at Cleveland had a convention of Twelve Thousand highly technically learned engineers representing the Road Builders Organization of America . . . The Town Hall at Atlanta, as well as the Town Hall at Cleveland, have the Metropolitan Grand Opera at a price within the reach of every person.

They all have Town Halls to meet in, with the exception of Allegheny County and Pittsburgh, which is the most centrally located County and City in the United States.

Allegheny County, too, can have them . . . When the County Bond Issue passes . . . a Town Hall second to none . . . an Airport equal to any now in existence . . . Beautiful Parks for the recreation of our people . . . New Highways and Bridges leading to them.

Employment of men and women is required for the construction of these improvements, as well as for the private development, which always follows large public improvements of this character.

There'll be plenty of work for everybody . . . At Good Wages . . . More sales for our merchants . . . More business for everyone . . . More employees to handle it . . . PROSPERITY.

Forbes

Stocks Calm, What Next? Trade Quiet; Farms Better.

By B. C. Forbes

AFTER the storm, calm in Wall Street. The storm has caused very widespread losses, but apparently relatively few fatalities.

Wall Street itself deserves one word of commendation for its own stout behavior during the storm. In the old days a stock market collapse halfway serious as that recently experienced would have caused brokerage failures and heavy losses to customers. This time nothing of the kind has occurred. The sole reason is that we now have a better monetary system; brokers have all along insisted upon substantial margins.

After the present lull, what?

MY own limited investigations reveal that most of the powerful bull operators still cling to the belief that stocks will find higher levels. True, they were taken aback by the swiftness and seriousness of the relapse. But they argue that conditions are just as favorable as they ever were and that it should be possible to steer the market in an upward direction.

My view is that today's stock quotations more nearly represent the real worth of the stocks today than did the higher quotations recently ruling. Not only so, but I doubt whether the speculative pot can be made to boil again in the near future. How artificial much of the spectacular activity was can be deduced from the extreme dullness of recent days. On Friday transactions were the smallest in almost a year.

AT least some part of the former activity came from the Pacific coast. The tragic collapse of the Giannini Bank stocks doubtless has cured for the present the speculative mania which raged there.

MONEY developments have commanded most attention. On Saturday another consignment of $17,500,000 of gold left New York for Europe, and additional heavy shipments to France impend. The total outflow since last fall has reached $600,000,000, thus theoretically contracting our credit facilities by $6,000,000,000. Sterling is now against shipments to London, and Canadian exchange presages arrivals of gold in New York from Canada. But the prospect is that the total gold movement will continue against this country.

Call money has kept near or at 6½ per cent, time money has touched 5⅞ per cent and bankers' acceptances also have been marked up. A reduction of almost $300,000,000 in brokers' loans in the last two weeks is important, but the contraction will have to go much further before it satisfies the ideas of the Federal Reserve authorities.

Between now and the opening of July the demand for funds, to effect half yearly dividend and interest payments, will be very heavy. Higher rates for day-to-day loans will be logical. They are likely to have an influence upon stock speculation.

The writer does not believe, however, that the country faces any thing like dear money for legitimate business purposes.

OUTSIDE of Wall Street, events have not been especially significant or important. Merger negotiations reflect the intense competition felt in the automobile industry. Favorable dividend announcements have reflected similar conditions in the steel industry. Latest building reports are a trifle less cheerful. Raw cotton has held up well, despite lighter manufacturing operations. Car loadings are running behind last year.

President F. Edson White, of Armour & Company, declares that middle western farmers are today better off than at any time since the war. Certainly grain prices compare well with a year ago, pork is nearly as high as it was then, while beef is very much higher, as also are hides and eggs.

Retail trade drifts along too quietly to satisfy merchants. Hand-to-mouth buying persists all along the line.

THE Democratic convention is not expected to furnish any sensations. It is taken for granted that Gov. Smith will be named. Financial and business leaders proclaim loudly that politics will not prove a factor this year. One might remark, however, that their talk is distinctly bolder than their actions. In the highest circles conservatism appears to be the almost universal rule.

The truth is that few authorities now figure that 1928 will greatly exceed the 1927 record. A normally quiet summer is looked for.

Should the election results satisfy high finance and big business, a decided spurt in trade and in speculation might easily be witnessed.

Last week's net loss of two points in average stock quotations encourages the hope that necessary readjustment may be effected without further disturbing demonstrations. Sane behavior in Wall Street would have a stabilizing effect upon general sentiment and business.

BANKER FREED ON BOND

John Camille, former manager of the foreign exchange department of the Citizens National Bank of Ellwood City, was released from jail Saturday and placed under $5,000 bond, pending trial in the Federal Court on a charge of embezzling funds of the bank. Camille was indicted May 8 and a few days later committed to jail. The indictment alleges of $6,935, in sums ranging from $185 to $3,400, between May 18, 1927, and January 18.

FREED FROM ASYLUM, ACQUITTED OF MURDER

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 25.—Fayette County's 10-year-old towel murder has resulted in the acquittal of John Selanik, charged with the strangling of Nick Martello, of Republic. Selanik, who spent 10 years in the Fairview Hospital for criminal insane, was released as cured and stood trial. The jury was out an hour.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, June 25.—There was no change in the raw sugar market today, with duty free sugars quoted at 4.27c delivered. No sales were reported.

The raw sugar futures market opened unchanged to 2 points lower and sold about 1 to 3 points lower after the call under general liquidation, prompted by the issuance of 305 July notices. Today was first notice day, and the circulation of these seemed to have an unsettling effect. They appeared to be stopped in the late fore noon and rallies followed, with prices at midday about 1 to 2 points net lower. Trading was fairly active, but was composed principally of July liquidation and exchanging from that delivery to later positions.

All refiners reduced their prices for refined sugar today to the basis of 6.00c for fine granulated, decline of 5 to 10 points. The demand, however, was limited to absolute requirements. One of the local refiners announced that his price of 6.00c was for today only, and that another price would be named later in the day and this probably tended to check new buying.

MARKET DULL, STOCKS SAG, RALLY

NEW YORK, June 25.—(AP.)—Extreme dullness characterized today's stock market, which sold off during the morning and then rallied under the leadership of the Southwestern Rails. Early losses of 1 to 5 points were cut down, or wiped out, and in many cases converted into gains running from 2 to 8 points. Only about 700,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours of trading.

Except for the stabilization of the French franc, which had no effect on the securities markets, there was no financial news of importance over the week-end. Credit conditions continued firm. Although call money appeared to be in fair supply at the renewal rate of 6½ per cent, the banks called about $15,000,000 in loans, presumably to strengthen their reserve positions in anticipation of a bank call and to prepare for the mid-year settlements.

Texas and Pacific was the market leader. Opening 1½ points lower at 140½, the stock quickly climbed to a new high record at 151¼. Missouri Pacific and St. Louis Southwestern each sold 2 points above last week's final quotations.

American Linseed preferred advanced 3 points to a new peak at 130 on the announcement that the Rockefeller holdings of that stock had been acquired by the Gold Dust Corporation. Linseed common moved up 2½ points. Substantial gains also were recorded by Indian Refining common and preferred, American International, U. S. Leather, Manhattan Electric Supply, Houston Oil and Canada Dry.

Radio rallied from a low of 169 to 173¼ by early afternoon, General Motors from 170¼ to 172 and U. S. Steel common from 132⅝ to 134.

Collins & Aikman common and General Outdoor Advertising certificates sank to new low levels for the year.

Helping Customers to Feel Independent

ADEQUATE banking connections provide the customer a degree of financial independence that every sound business can and should have.

Many substantial patrons of the Farmers Deposit National Bank have for years been aware of the independence they enjoy through the assurance that we are able, ready and glad to meet their reasonable requirements, both as depositors and as borrowers.

Numbers of them began with us in ordinary times like the present, when no immediate need existed for the relationship. Their growth long ago made us of primary importance in their financial independence. They know that they can depend upon us. That knowledge is based upon mutual esteem and mutual understanding that is unmistakable.

We welcome accounts of those to whom we are glad to feel obligated.

IRREGULAR PRICE CHANGES ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

SHARP DROP IN ARMSTRONG

No changes of importance were recorded in the early dealings on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. Business was in small volume, with the trading fairly well scattered.

United Engineering and Foundry, which sold off to a new low at the end of last week, was supported this morning at a fraction above Saturday's close but, as there was no heavy volume of the stock offered, the actual trend in the issue was rather indefinite. Like other stocks in the heavy industrial section, Engineering has been working lower for the past few weeks, following the general course of prices in New York. The recessions in most of these issues is attributed chiefly to technical conditions and while earnings in some cases do not make favorable comparison with the earlier months of last year, it is generally expected that results for the full 12 months will be satisfactory.

Arkansas Gas was the active member of the fuel group and while offered in fairly large amounts during the forenoon session, managed to hold close to the previous session's average.

Colonial Trust Company strengthened up this morning on a bid for 25 shares with the buyer paying five points above the last previous price. Today's price of 305 compares with the high of 310 reached on the bulge a few weeks ago, and the year's low of 250 from which the recent advance started.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, June 25.—(AP.)—With favorable weather Northwest and Liverpool quotations showing absence of strength, wheat prices here averaged lower today in the early dealings. The bearish factors proved to be more than a counterbalance for rains over the week-end in the Southwest. Opening unchanged to ⅛c off, Chicago wheat later underwent a moderate general setback. Corn, oats and provisions tended upward, corn starting at ⅜c decline to 1½c advance, and subsequently holding near to the initial range.

At noon wheat was ⅛c to ⅜c net higher and corn ⅜c to ⅝c up.

Continuance of too much dampness in the harvest region southwest failed to stimulate buying here in the wheat market today and traders gave attention to talk which was current that a turn to unfavorable weather in the northwest would be requisite if price advances were to be sustained. Meanwhile, the Liverpool market was apparently being governed almost entirely by crop advices from North America, and newly harvested wheat was arriving rather freely at Kansas terminals, Wichita, for example, reporting today's receipts there as totaling 140 cars.

Tension regarding increasing demand and decreasing supplies of old corn led at times today to higher prices all around in the corn market. According to one trade authority, demand from feeders is taking care of a good sized portion of receipts now at interior points, the reason being that present prices for livestock have made feeding remunerative.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE outlook for the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railway Company has been brightened by two new developments. One will strengthen the road's position in future years. The other is having an immediate effect on earnings. The long range advantage will be found in the building of the connection with the Western Maryland. The nearer improvement lies in the increase in coal traffic.

ABOUT half of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia's freight traffic in 1926 consisted of coal tonnage. When the coal strike started on April 1, 1927, this portion of the loadings was practically eliminated. Sharp declines in gross revenue and in earnings followed. It was fortunate that freight traffic other than coal had been intensively built up previous to the strike since this made the loss of coal business less serious.

SINCE the strike call the mines along the line have been slowly increasing production. Dividend requirements on the capital stock, which is on a $6 annual basis, were not earned during the last nine months of 1927 or during the first quarter of this year. Growing coal shipments began to be felt a few months ago, however. Dividend requirements were earned in April of this year for the first time since the strike. In that month surplus after charges was $163,884 against monthly dividend requirements of $151,175. May surplus has been estimated at $160,000 and June at $170,000.

AS A result of the slump in coal traffic, the company earned only $5.67 a share on its stock in 1927 compared with $8.65 a share in 1926. Earnings in the first quarter continued less than dividend requirements. In addition it was necessary to make large purchases of Wheeling and Lake Erie Railway stock in order to insure the road's position in possible mergers. This reduced working capital and placed the continuance of the dividends at the present rate in some doubt.

THE improvement in traffic during the last few months and the fact that dividends will be earned in the quarter ending June 30 by some margin have put the road in a much better position to continue dividend payments. No official comment has been made, but the regular quarterly declaration of $1.50 a share is expected at the meeting of the directors in New York on Wednesday.

AT THE meeting the directors also will act on plans to build the extension to Connellsville, which has been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The line, which will cover a distance of 38 miles at a cost of $12,801,619, will open a new trunk line route to the seaboard, making the Pittsburgh and West Virginia a link between the Wheeling and Lake Erie on the west and the Western Maryland on the east.

UNLIKE most new railroad lines, the extension to Connellsville may be expected to show profits from the time of its completion. There will be no long wait for commerce along its lines to be built up. It will secure an immediate flow of traffic from the roads connecting with it, which already are in highly developed industrial sections.

THE Pittsburgh and West Virginia is in an excellent position to finance the new line. With physical properties and investments valued at $45,905,381 it has a funded debt of only $3,966,000. This is remarkably low for a railroad. Most lines are heavily bonded. In addition to this it has no preferred stock outstanding. Its current financial position is not particularly good, but this resulted from investing $3,516,877 in Wheeling and Lake Erie stock in 1927. Working capital can be readily increased by long term financing, which must be done to pay for the extension of the line.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, June 25.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 4 to 14 points and quickly sold about 10 to 15 points net higher on a continuation of last week's buying movement, stimulated by reports of further rains in the South over Sunday.

The advance carried all new crop months into new high ground, October selling at 22.08c, but this price evidently attracted extensive realizing and there was probably some selling for a reaction. Offerings increased slightly after publication of the weather map which showed somewhat less rain than anticipated, and October sold off to 21.91c by the end of the first hour, or back to about Saturday's closing quotations.

A favorable view of the western belt forecast led to increased offerings during the forenoon, but after selling off to 21.83c for October, or about 10 to 12 points net lower, the market steadied on the prospects for showers in the eastern belt. Buying became more active on the detailed weather report and October sold up to 22.01c, or within 7 points of the early high level, and about 3 to 6 points net higher on the more active positions.

JUBILEE OF OPERA PLANNED IN DRESDEN

DRESDEN — Fifty years have passed since the Dresden Opera House was erected on the site of the one burned down in 1869. The jubilee year will bring a number of especially notable performances to celebrate the anniversary.

Prominent among these will be the first performance of Richard Strauss' new opera, "The Egyptian Helena," based on a work by Hugo von Hofmannsthal. It will be given June 6, with Elisabeth Rethberg, of the Metropolitan Opera, in the title role.

In the same month the two state theaters in Dresden will present a repertoire of their best works—the opera under the direction of Dr. Reucker and the Schauspiel under Director Paul Wiecke. The chief offerings will be Strauss, Mozart and Wagner.

FIND CONCRETE ROAD UPKEEP CHEAPEST

The State Board of Public Roads of Rhode Island has kept close track of the maintenance costs for the last seven years. During this time it has cost the state $77.08 per mile per year to keep up Portland cement concrete. Bituminous macadam, through the same period, averaged $185.85 per mile per year; bituminous concrete built of coarse aggregate cost $721.24 and bituminous concrete built of graded aggregate $132.

Pavement upkeep for the three major types of highways in New York state during a 10-year period from 1916 to 1925 follows:

Bituminous macadam, $656 average per mile.
Waterbound macadam, $864 average per mile.
First-class concrete, $227 average per mile.

During this same period gravel roads cost on an average $914 per mile to maintain. These figures, compiled by David Noonan, deputy commissioner of highways, include cost of maintaining roadsides as well as pavement surfaces.

Illinois reports the following average cost for maintaining roads for the years 1922 to 1926 inclusive: Average upkeep costs on concrete, per miles, $80.24; brick, $117.99; bituminous macadam, $179.52; waterbound macadam, $398.87. The maintenance costs reported by the Illinois Division of Highways are for the wearing surface only and do not include the keeping up of roadsides.

Figures compiled by the Minnesota Highway Commission show the yearly cost of maintaining state trunk highway No. 1, formerly a gravel road, was twice that of state trunk highway No. 3, a concrete highway. Both are heavy traffic roads. Depreciation, interest on investment and upkeep of the concrete highway No. 3 amounted to $1,678 per mile per year, while on the gravel road the annual cost per mile was $3,101.

PRODUCE MARKET

The fruit and vegetable market was brisk in the local wholesale district today, with quotations for the most part unchanged.

The butter, egg and cheese market is firm, but the trading continued slow.

Demand in the poultry market is still slow, the supplies being liberal. Quotations were practically unchanged.

Car lot supplies were fairly heavy today, a total of 633 being on track. Arrivals included 33 cars of cabbages, 40 cantaloupes, 2 celery, 11 lemons, 11 lettuce, 5 onions, 13 oranges, 4 peaches, 1 turnips, 3 dewberries, 2 corn, 2 cucumbers, 3 carrots, 66 potatoes, 64 tomatoes, 8 watermelons, 6 plums, 2 pineapples and 2 beans.

GREENSBURG BUILDER DIES OF HEART ATTACK

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 25.—James H. Offutt, 51, building contractor, died last night following a heart attack.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

Favors Railroad Stocks.

H. S. Edwards & Co. say: "For several weeks now be have been directing attention to the improving statistical outlook for the rail group, due in part to the fact that car loadings are now practically on a parity with a year ago, after having shown declines for a year, and that the traffic outlook is better, and in part to the fact that the prospect is for increasing traffic over the remainder of the year. Almost coincidental with this change in the outlook for the railroads was the general market reaction which carried the rail averages to within 2 points of the year's low of February and 14 points below the year's high, reached in May. The old principle that good stocks are sold to protect the bad in any period of forced liquidation applied very definitely once again, but from this low level the railroad stocks have shown more ability to recover than the remainder of the market, and it appears at this time that the group is being looked toward as the one embodying the best fundamental basis on which to build a market recovery."

Texas and Pacific Spurts.

Texas and Pacific enjoyed a wide rise in the railroad section on buying which carried it up 8 points from the opening. Texas has been showing unusually strong earnings this year with gross revenues for the first five months (May estimated), amounting to $20,265,000 as compared with $15,621,000 in the corresponding period last year, a gain of approximately 29 per cent. For the 12 months ended May 31 the road's earnings were equivalent to $12.70 a share against $7.55 for the year 1927. With the road's heaviest traffic period ahead, it appears probable that earnings for the calendar year 1928 will run somewhere near $20 a share. The stock was recently established on a $5 annual dividend basis, but such earnings as are shown in the latest statements warrant expectations of higher payments to come. Missouri Pacific owns most of the Texas and Pacific stock and is said to have been gradually adding to its holdings.

Dodge Preferred Dividends.

The current quarterly dividend on 7 per cent preference stock of Dodge Brothers, Inc., payable July 15 to stock of record June 27, will be paid on all Dodge preference stock deposited under the plan recently announced whereby the Chrysler Motor Company would acquire the assets of Dodge Brothers, Inc. All stocks turned in to them and bearing the postmark of June 25 would be considered as officially deposited within the time limit set. The time limit expires today.

National Cash Register.

Foreign business of the National Cash Register Company this year shows a gain of 25 to 30 per cent over 1927, according to F. B. Patterson, president. "European business has shown remarkable progress during recent months," Mr. Patterson stated, "and the outlook for the remainder of the year is bright." Regarding the domestic outlook, Mr. Patterson predicted that 1928 earnings of the National Cash Register Company would show a satisfactory improvement over last year.

Fishers' Stock Index Down.

Prof. Irving Fisher's stock price index is 343.5 for the past week, against 357.8 the previous week and 365.3 a month ago. Prof. Fisher's commodity price index is 97.9 for the past week, against 97.8 the previous week and 98.8 a month ago.

May Auto Output Exceeds 1927.

May automobile production in the United States totaled 425,990 units, of which 375,798 were passenger cars and 50,192 trucks, compared with 404,115 units in May 1927, of which 357,150 were passenger cars and 46,395 trucks, according to the Department of Commerce.

United States Leads in Chemicals.

"Favored by a very large domestic market, the chemical industry of the United States has grown to be the largest in the world, with an annual production valued in excess of $2,278,000,000," says the New York Trust Company. The United States, nevertheless, is not independent of the chemicals of other countries. While it is the second largest exporter in the world, it is also the largest importer, and both imports and exports have been increasing. In 1927 exports amounted to $184,133,000, while imports were valued at $198,903,000. While the chemical imports and exports of any country are largely dependent upon what products are indigenous, nevertheless the synthetic manufacture of chameicals makes changes almost overnight in this foreign trade. The production of synthetic nitrate in Germany, for example, had a marked effect upon the natural nitrate industry of Chile. Camphor was formerly obtained from Japan, but now the synthetic commodity comes from Germany. The United States, which once secured almost all its natural indigo from British India, now secures almost all its indigo in the synthetic form from Germany.

Political Uncertainties.

Political uncertainties will remain a factor in the stock market, and an important one, until the November election, the United Business Service says in its current report. Another factor is the brokers' loan situation which, although slightly improved, is due for continued application of the deflationary measures imposed by Federal Reserve authorities. In other words, money rates will probably not be allowed to ease sufficiently to encourage speculation until loans have been reduced by at least $500,000,000 and perhaps more. Speculative enthusiasm has suffered a real shock in the past two weeks and it will require some pretty rugged strong-arm work to regain even a small part of the following that has been attracted to the market during the past year or two. On the other side of the picture we have an enormous amount of money still seeking employment, and as investment opportunities make their appearance in further spells of weakness this demand will assert itself. The result will probably be irregularity of the downward movement from this point on.

Sugars Under Pressure.

The principal sugar refining companies are now on a basis of 6 cents for refined sugar, a reduction of 5 to 10 points from a week ago. The decline in the commodity influenced some selling in the sugar stocks, directed cheifly against American Sugar, which sold off deliberately in the early trading. The offerings of American Sugar were this morning were the heaviest for some time and forced the stock back to lowest price of the recent markets.

Sugar Meltings Lower.

Meltings of 15 sugar refiners this year to June 16 were 4,507,844,621 pounds, against 5,304,348,752 pounds from January 1 to June 18, 1927, the Sugar Institute reports. Total deliveries of 15 refiners and one importer this year to May 31 were 3,832,024,000 pounds, against 3,882,043,400 pounds a year ago, a decrease of 1.29 per cent.

California Output Down.

Crude oil production in the state of California for the week ended June 23 totaled 644,250 barrels, as against 646,000 barrels for the preceding week, a decline of 1,750 barrels, according to actual pipeline figures.

Panama Issue Oversubscribed.

The National City Company, Kissell, Kinnicut & Co., Illinois Merchants Trust Company and Continental National Company announced oversubscription and closing of books on their offering of $12,000,000 Republic of Panama 35-year 5 per cent external secured sinking fund gold bonds, series A, due May 15, 1963. The bonds were offered this morning.

New Postum on $3 Basis.

Postum Company, Inc., declared a 100 per cent stock dividend and a 75 cents quarterly cash dividend on the new stock, payable August 1 to record July 16 on the cash dividend and July 13 to record July 3 on the stock dividend. The cash dividend is equal to $6 per annum on the old stock, which received $5 a year.

Sears, Roebuck.

Julius Rosenwald, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co., admits the probability of an increase of 800,000 shares in the authorized capital stock of Sears, Roebuck & Co., but stated that it is unlikely that any consideration will be given the distribution of the additional stock at this time. Mr. Rosenwald said that it is the desire of the directors to have the additional stock in the treasury for any matter which may be decided upon at a later date.

Fox Brothers Get Airport Jobs.

Fox Brothers International Corporation, New York, has been awarded a $5,000,000 contract for the construction of airports at Seville, Spain, which will be the base of a trans-oceanic airship line of Zeppelins operating from Seville to Buenos Aires. A similar airport will be built in Buenos Aires.

Cotton at New High for Season.

Reported heavy rains in the cotton belt caused heavy buying in cotton this morning and sent prices to new high marks for the season, with October going above 22 cents. Buying came from a wide area and included new outside demand as well as price fixing by mills.

Pan Western Assets.

Total assets of Pan-American Western Petroleum Company at the close of 1927 were $52,923,560, against $63,318,014 the year before, and surplus $6,374,164, against $10,902,566. Current assets were $18,831,320 and current liabilities $9,673,561. Control of the company was acquired recently by the Richfield Oil Company of California.

Chesapeake Surplus Down.

Surplus of the Chesapeake and Ohio for May after charges and sinking fund appropriations declined to $2,317,387 from $2,505,519 in May last year, and for five months of 1928 to $8,594,545 from $11,465,981 in the corresponding 1927 period.

Bancitaly Holds Up.

The buying of Bancitaly Corporation on Saturday, both in New York and San Francisco, was of exceptionally fine quality, according to San Francisco reports. It was stated that several of the most powerful banks and financial institutions in the country were availing themselves of the opportunity that was then presented to purchase large blocks of the Giannini stock at the prevailing low prices.

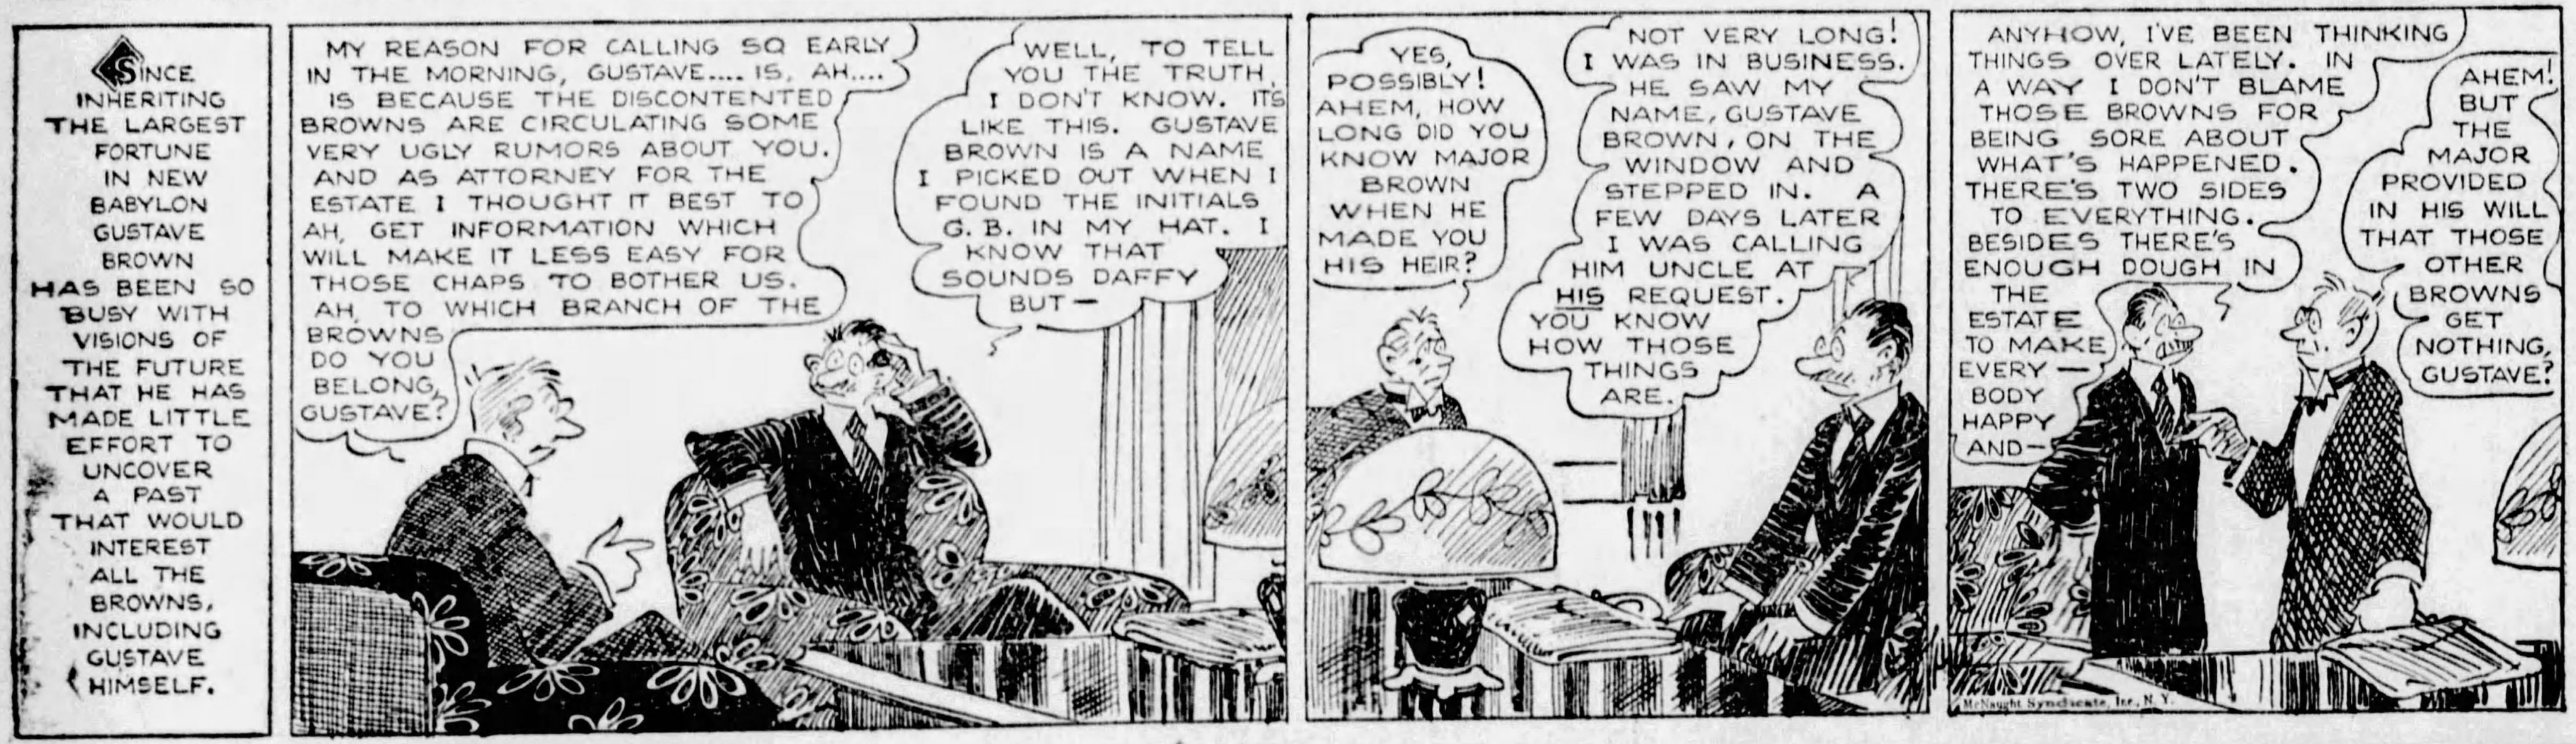
Complications



SINCE INHERITING THE LARGEST FORTUNE IN NEW BABYLON GUSTAVE BROWN HAS BEEN SO BUSY WITH VISIONS OF THE FUTURE THAT HE HAS MADE LITTLE EFFORT TO UNCOVER A PAST THAT WOULD INTEREST ALL THE BROWNS, INCLUDING GUSTAVE HIMSELF.
MY REASON FOR CALLING SO EARLY IN THE MORNING, GUSTAVE.... IS, AH.... IS BECAUSE THE DISCONTENTED BROWNS ARE CIRCULATING SOME VERY UGLY RUMORS ABOUT YOU. AND AS ATTORNEY FOR THE ESTATE I THOUGHT IT BEST TO AH, GET INFORMATION WHICH WILL MAKE IT LESS EASY FOR THOSE CHAPS TO BOTHER US. AH, TO WHICH BRANCH OF THE BROWNS DO YOU BELONG, GUSTAVE?
WELL, TO TELL YOU THE TRUTH, I DON'T KNOW. IT'S LIKE THIS. GUSTAVE BROWN IS A NAME I PICKED OUT WHEN I FOUND THE INITIALS G. B. IN MY HAT. I KNOW THAT SOUNDS DAFFY BUT — YES, POSSIBLY! AHEM, HOW LONG DID YOU KNOW MAJOR BROWN WHEN HE MADE YOU HIS HEIR?
NOT VERY LONG! I WAS IN BUSINESS. HE SAW MY NAME, GUSTAVE BROWN, ON THE WINDOW AND STEPPED IN. A FEW DAYS LATER I WAS CALLING HIM UNCLE AT HIS REQUEST. YOU KNOW HOW THOSE THINGS ARE.
ANYHOW, I'VE BEEN THINKING THINGS OVER LATELY. IN A WAY I DON'T BLAME THOSE BROWNS FOR BEING SORE ABOUT WHAT'S HAPPENED. THERE'S TWO SIDES TO EVERYTHING. BESIDES THERE'S ENOUGH DOUGH IN THE ESTATE TO MAKE EVERY — BODY HAPPY AND — AHEM! BUT THE MAJOR PROVIDED IN HIS WILL THAT THOSE OTHER BROWNS GET NOTHING, GUSTAVE?

P. C. W. SUMMER CLASSES

Each spring finds thousands of college graduates returning to the campuses where they spent four of the happiest years of their lives. Just so the alumnae of the Pennsylvania College for Women, returned to their beautiful campus on Woodland road in the East End. Of this lovely spot Mrs. Annie Clark Miller has written in her "Chronicles of Pittsburgh and Its Environs."

"Woodland road is today the most beautiful and exclusive residence district in Pittsburgh. The neighbors are the patrons and friends of the Pennsylvania College for Women, whose dormitories and halls hide among the trees near the summit of the hill. This college was the outcome of a school fostered by the Presbyterian Church, whose foundations in this community are as deep as the roots of Penns Woods."

This restful spot will be enjoyed for three weeks during July by 100 public school teachers attending the Frick Summer School. Lecturers of national prominence will be brought here by the Frick Commission to deliver a course of lectures on social service problems and the members of the summer school are also brought in contact with the heads of the social agencies of the city. The lectures are given on Woodland Hall porch and the tachers enjoy a delightful dormitory life.

Freshmen, entering the Pennsylvania College for Women this fall, will have the satisfaction of knowing that upon completion of their four years' course they will receive the bachelor of arts degree, conferred by a Class A college whose academic ratings are recognized and accepted the same as any eastern college. Beside, the college offers courses leading to professional certificates in spoken English, social service and music.

The Pennsylvania College for Women is most fortunate to have as its president, Cora Helen Coolidge, Litt. D. and as dean, Mary Helen Marks, A. M.

SPEECH SCHOOL ROLLS GROW

The Pittsburgh School of Speech has had an unusual growth during the past year. Two hundred and fifty students have been enrolled in courses offered by this institution. It is the only school of speech in the east that devotes its entire time to the spoken word. The director, Elbert R. Moses, has become a national figure. His "Gems of American Literature" broadcast from KDKA have been heard by millions.

The Pittsburgh School of Speech, besides its regular courses, offered at the school, teaches public speaking classes in the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, the Philadelphia Company and the Central Y. M. C. A.

Expression, public speaking and dramatic art are the basic courses offered at the school. Work in these branches may be taken in class or privately. Courses are given during the day and each evening. During commencement week this year six full programs of dramatic art, expression and public speaking were presented. These public programs give the students the opportunity of practical practice which is invaluable in their training. Courses leading to diploma cover two years of work.

For appointments, art catalog and general information, telephone Fairfax 3422, or address Elbert R. Moses, director, 930 North Lincoln avenue, North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BLINN, ACTOR, DIES OF FALL

NEW YORK, June 25.—The death of Holbrook Blinn, noted actor, was mourned today by thousands of theatergoers and a host of his stage and motion picture associates. The veteran thespian, cheerful to the end, had been confident of recovering from the injuries which caused his death, and his friends had expected to see him in another production this fall.

Blinn died last night at his country home at Croton-on-Hudson as a result of injuries sustained when he was thrown from his horse while riding near his home on June 16. An infection of the arm set in and caused poor blood circulation.

REAL ESTATE

The Paul Place plan, including 320 lots in the West Liberty avenue district, South Hills, has been sold through the Franklin Realty Company for Thomas J. Ingram to an investor, who plans to market the lots. The ground was formerly the property of the Elizabeth Paul estate. It is understood that the tract had been held at $65,000.

The C. L. Saxton Company sold for Samuel Smith five houses at 1232-34 Warner street and 1231-35 Adams street, North Side, for $15,000. The lot is 60x120 feet. The same brokers sold for Henry Getz to Mary Marks 25x100 feet of vacant in East Burgess street, University Park plan, for $1,125.

The board of governors of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board will meet Thursday at 11 a. m. at board headquarters, 335 Second avenue.

In Tarentum, William A. Marvin has sold to Edmund J. Houser 50x100 feet in East Tenth avenue.

In Mt. Lebanon, Laura D. Cole has sold to Harry Sanderson a property in Meadowcroft avenue. The buyer reconveyed the property to Louis C. Bruckman.

Tenth Ward—S. Carlis, brick and tile apartment, 1741 Chislett street, $18,500; R. Johnston, brick and tile dwelling, 171 Stanton court, $8,200.

ORDERS POLICE TO BRING RAID EVIDENCE

Conflicting testimony in Morals Court today met demand of Magistrate A. D. Brandon that police produce a slot machine alleged to have been seen Saturday night in a restaurant at 2911 Penn avenue.

"There wasn't any slot machine in the place when I got there," Patrolman John Lavery of Penn Avenue Police Station testified.

Dave McFadden, Negro, proprietor of the restaurant, also denied having had a slot machine.

Tony Schulz, of Penn avenue, whose complaint of being robbed of $40 by a Negro woman caused police to arrest McFadden and his wife, testified he had had a bill changed to get nickels to put into the machine.

Magistrate Brandon yesterday ordered McFadden's case held over and ordered police to bring in the slot machine and liquor confiscated. A three-gallon jug of liquor alone was brought in as evidence today.

Brandon held McFadden for court charged with violating the Snyder act.

DUFFS IRON CITY IS LEADER

Three names in the field of business education have practically dominated it in this district for over three-fourths of a century—Duff's, Iron City and Martin's. There are few business houses in Pittsburgh that do not have among their executive and office employes, persons who are not graduates of one of these three institutions.

Duff's is the pioneer business school of America and in its 88 years of operation has played a big part in the development of commercial education in this country. The number of its graduates up to the time of consolidation with the Iron City College and the Martin Shorthand School was over 50,000 and the combined graduates of the three schools is over 100,000. This is a contribution to the business interest of this district that has called forth the praise of the business men in volumes of letters on file at the school offices.

In 1922 these three institutions were merged into one institution and chartered under the name of Duffs-Iron City College. The combined Duffs, Iron City College and Martin's is in a new school building at 424 Duquesne way where the home-like housings are fitting the tradition of these three personal efficiency schools, under one roof, with the triple service of each being daily exerted on behalf of its classes.

If We Really Want Things We Must Purchase and Pay

Public Improvements Don't GROW—They're BUILT. Vote for ALL Items on the Bond Issue TOMORROW!

TOMORROW comes the ballot on the proposed $43,680,000 improvement bond issue. It has been discussed pro and con—mostly pro—and now comes the day when the voters will put their seal of approval or disapproval on the most extensive constructive program ever fostered by the county.

THERE is optimism as to the outcome. It is felt that the mass opinion of the county has been pretty well registered in the temper of various meetings and the unqualified indorsement of the loan as a whole on the part of numerous organizations and prominent individuals. All has been open and free. True, there have been "boosters" at work, but they have carried their message to the public with utmost frankness and have not sought to further a favored project and slight another, but have urged the adoption of the loan as a whole.

IT is hard to conceive of a more idealistic way of bringing about public improvements than the present campaign. The County Commissioners, after arranging their own program of needed improvements, devoted many days to hearing citizens from all parts of the county, many hundreds appearing to urge inclusion of things they desired. The Commissioners then compared notes, rearranged their schedule to take in what seemed the more urgently needed projects and rejected others originally contemplated.

SO the program that comes before the citizens tomorrow virtually is one they themselves arranged. They knew their needs and asked for them. The County Commissioners heeded their requests as best they could under the circumstances and now put it up to the county as a whole to decide if it wants what the people requested originally.

AS to the merit of the various projects, that has been discussed to the final detail. It is admitted there is a great and urgent need for the bridges, roads, airport, town hall and other things.

WHEN you go away you are struck by the wonderful boulevards, marvelous public buildings and other evidences of progress in other cities and come back wondering why you can't have them at home. You can. Those things didn't just grow in the other cities. Nobody made the town a present of them. The PEOPLE of those towns built them and PAID for them. That is just what we will HAVE TO DO if we want them.

DO we REALLY WANT them? Do we really want to be progressive? Do we really want to leave the coming generation a better county than the one we inherited?

IF we do, we will vote AFFIRMATIVELY on the PEOPLE'S improvement loan tomorrow.

Never Be Discouraged

Success Is Often Rooted in Misfortune.

Peter J. Coll, Jr., a cripple, 22 years old, became melancholy reading of athletic feats. He was discouraged because he could not shine in sports and killed himself.

The unfortunate young man, for 14 years a victim of infantile paralysis, heard about baseball, boxing and other SPORTS.

He might have been comforted by a different view of life had he been told of the Greek cripple, Epictetus, whose life and work have done the world more good than the work of all the athletes combined—or he might have studied Pope, the British poet, who had to be sewed up in his stiff canvas jacket every day before he could begin working—or Byron, who might never have written his fine poems had he not been born a cripple and compelled to shine through his brain instead of through his feet.

Never be discouraged unless your BRAIN is wrong. And, even then, don't be discouraged—another life will give you another chance.

Learn to Fly

There's Gold in the Mountains.

Young men, learn to fly and let the flying machine take the place of the patient little donkey in prospecting for precious metals.

That will provide the necessary increased gold supply. Another step will be prospecting under water with the submarine. Many a billion barrels of oil lie under the ocean, and the tin mines of England run far out under the water. Mines of all kinds are hidden by the waves.

John E. Hammell, head of Northern Aerial Minerals Exploration, Ltd., is here to buy $500,000 worth of airplanes to prospect for precious metals over 1,000,000 square miles of virgin Canadian territory.

The fliers will explore inaccessible regions, never seen by any white man.

Wise Irish Free State

Others TALK. Ireland SAVES.

While other nations talk of peace and disarmament, the Irish Free State reduces its small standing army from 12,000 to 5,000.

The 5,000 will be well trained, well armed, a nucleus ready to supply officers in case of emergency. Reserves will make it possible to increase the army to 30,000 on short notice. Meanwhile the Irish Free State saves money. This is made possible by the big ships, big cannon and fighting air fleet of the British Empire. There is advantage in a big partner.

The Struggle for Money

How Many Names It Has.

How many American words meaning "money" can you remember?

Dr. Vizetelly quotes fifty such words, leaving out many well known. Many things have been used for money—from wood, leather, shells, slaves and cattle, to gold.

Our word "money" comes from Moneta, surname of Juno, Roman currency being coined in the Temple of Juno-Moneta.

Millions spend their lives collecting money, with never a thought for the ancient divinity.

Wise men of all times have written about money, from Aristotle to Henry George, including Copernicus, Locke, Newton, John Stuart Mill, but no one has convinced men that true wisdom is to get money enough to insure independence, freedom from slavery, and then think of other things.

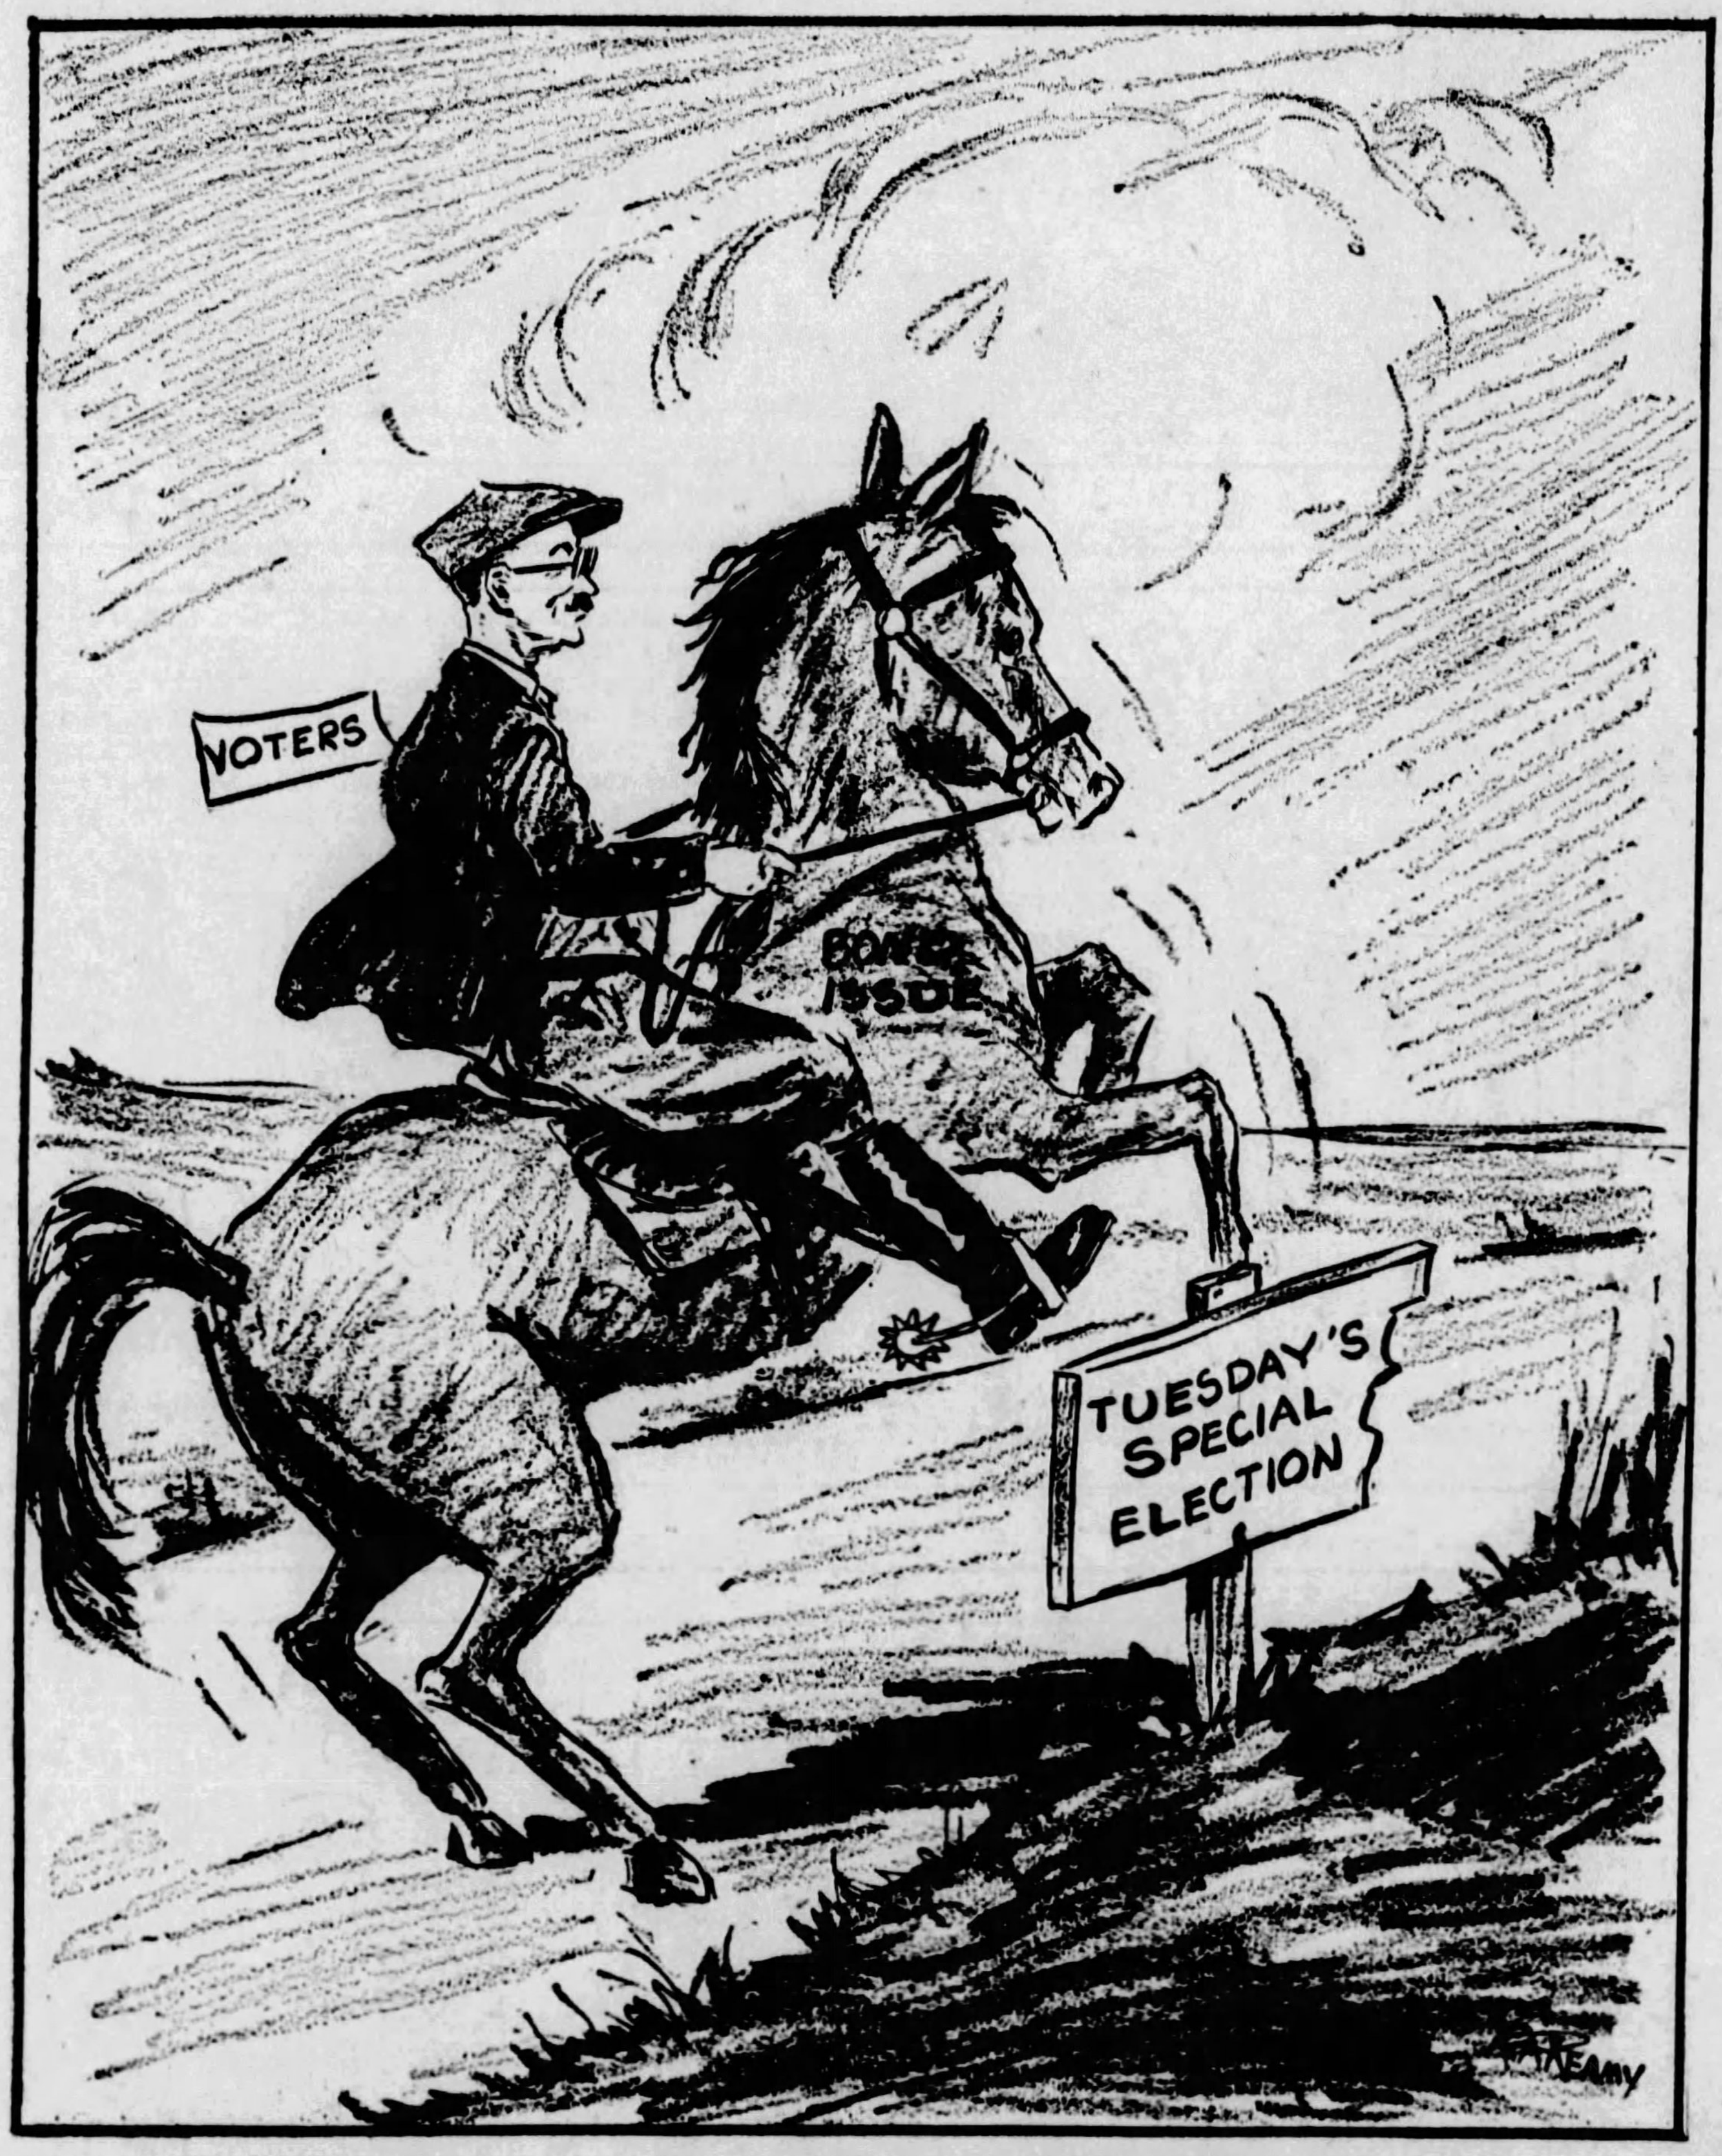
Booted and Spurred, and Ready to Ride



New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

DIARY of a modern Pepys: Out in an early mist and no city so responds to volatile moods of the weather, all passersby seeming glum. But when the sun came out later there galvanized a human sparkle and warmth. Yet my banker seemed untouched by it.

Came news Meredith Nicholson has become a councilman in Indianapolis, which somehow amused me, and so to a luncheon of a huge baked potato and a prune whip and gossiped with Blanche Ring and Charles Winninger. Also saw a gentleman's monocle fall into his soup, which I thought happened only in burlesque halls.

Idled among crowds watching subway diggers and one of the workers had a coiling serpent tattoed around his neck. So home and to dinner with Lee Olwell, Joseph Moore, Roy Howard and our wives, and later to Charlie Journal's Montmatre to watch the dancers awhile.

A hole in the wall notion store on Second avenue has been drawing a limousine trade that stirred the curiosity of neighborhood merchants. Investigation developed it sold freshly parched salted corn two days a week.

Parched corn run through a coffee grinder and mixed with sugar was once a delectable dessert in the back country. And a grand dish. Nor can I forget the day the minister tried to answer a question with his mouth full of it, thereby giving a perfect imitation of a desert sand storm.

Another little store on Second avenue offers "Italian hyacinths." Under another name it is known as garlic.

There is a novelist partial to garlic. Indeed in high garlic circles he might be called a worshiper. Only recently he complained at a literary club that with success he had noticed a difference and gradual falling away among those of whom he was fond. Even his best friends, I suppose, won't tell him.

* * *

At a theater one night I sat—without a gas mask—in front of a man who had partaken generously of garlic with a few side crates of onions. Somehow I managed to struggle through the evening without losing consciousness—just a few black spots before the eyes. But a man next to him was not so tolerant. As the curtain fell he turned and said: "Thanks for a pleasant evening. I spent it chinning myself on your breath."

Coney Island is supposed to be the haven only of the seeker for cheap and tawdry thrills. And yet among patrons are some of the most sedate and dignified citizens of the city. There are prominent bankers, surgeons and others high in professional life who find enjoyment in Coney's forced frenzy.

They go there several times a season—usually on excursion buses—to lose themselves in the gaudy pyrotechnics, corybantic music and paste-like brilliance. There is a magic hocus-pocus to Coney's fairyland that appeals to the Pan in every man. And there is steeplechase where it never rains.

They do not stand on the side lines to watch. They flip back the years and become boys again—thrilling to water-shoots, the slide-the-bumps, the witching-waves, the haunted tunnels and all the other glittering buncombe. They return to their daily solemnity full of hot dogs, colored lemonade and dog tired. But happy.

It is the same flaccid strain in human dignity that fills freak shows and flea circuses in New York's mid-town. I never visited the Hippodrome's Toyland with its toy city run by midgets that I was not impressed by crisp elderly men trying sheepishly not to show their enthusiasm.

* * *

Being dignified anyway is a lot of hooey. The only time I ever felt I had attained dignity was at a ranch house in Texas where I appeared with a cane and bright yellow gloves. I wound up getting a first-class paste in the eye.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Charm of a Garden

CULTIVATE your own garden, as far as you have time and ability for such fine work, but in any case don't fail to enjoy its beauty and its stimulus. The pushing up of a new-born bean or pea, shouldering aside the soft ground to get is first breath of air and first glimpse of the sun, is an unforgettable sight. The whole unsolved marvel of life is there. You feel that there is some sort of kinship between you and that struggling bit of animated existence, pushing up out of the soil, with motion that is actually visible with a little watching. The baby plant throws off the covering of its cradle, and its pale green face smiles in the sunshine. It feels its life, and you feel it sympathetically. Surely there is something behind the speculations of that Hindoo philosopher-botanist who avers that plants, too, are emotional; that they even have heart-beats. Is not emotion the very basis of life?

When the maker of scientific movie exhibits on the screen the little dramas of plant birth and plant growth, he doesn't make them seem a whit less wonderful or in the least degree more suggestive of mere chemical action or physical response to stimulus. He cannot rob them of the vivid impression of real life, of something superior to inanimate nature and its dead equations, which they thrust before the eyes of the watcher.

But the smallest country place may have its garden and be a hundred-fold more attractive for it not only to its possessors, but to all its neighbors and to passersby. Not only the beds of flowers but the rows of humblest vegetables draw the eyes and delight the senses. A walk in the morning through the odor-laden air of the garden gives impressions of delight that endure all day. Wise old Montaigne, the French Bacon, made some remarkable observations on the pleasures and utilities of the perfumes that nature so abundantly provides, and which are not half enough noted by most persons. He says, among other things (Florio's translation):

"Physicians might, in mine opinion, draw more use and good from odors than they do. For myself have often perceived that according unto their strength and quality they change and alter, and move my spirits and work strange effects in me; which makes me approve the common saying that the invention of incense and perfumes in churches, so ancient and so far-dispensed throughout all nations and religions, to comfort, to quicken, to rouse and to purify our senses that so we might be the apter and the readier unto contemplation."

In this respect a garden may be said to resemble a well thurified church. Its odors may awaken your spirits to more edifying thoughts.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Chip on Your Shoulder

HAVE the years you have spent in a metropolis robbed you of the fruit of your early training in courtesy and kindness?

When you leave your boarding place you are in a belligerent mood.

Especially in the mornings you seem almost to seek disagreeable conditions for altercations.

Do you actually get a kick out of this quarrelsome spirit?

You act as if you would be disappointed if someone did not attempt to knock the chip off your shoulders.

You are primed and ready in the morning, snappy toward those who crowd you and jostle you in your progress.

You seem to get satisfaction from calling down some person whom you think has usurped certain of your rights.

Of course, the only way to get ahead is to be able to stand for your rights as occasion demands.

But to be eternally forcing such tactics to the fore, is to stamp you as one of the lesser lights, for the big man does not use his fighting garb at all times.

Repressed forces are greater when called out by necessity.

Isn't It So?

A girl isn't necessarily an angel because she is flighty.

No man ever gets so poor that he can afford to have holes in his pockets.

It is always well to have friends you can trust, but those who trust you are more sought after.

It is sometimes difficult to convince a young man that all the world loves a lover after he has met the dear girl's father.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

THE girls say that the boys are to blame, and the boys blame it all on the girls. Course I don't know, but the dispute brings a lot of stories out, and some of 'em may even be funny.

This here John wasn't very well acquainted with his Nell, but he thought maybe it was time to get acquainted. So he suggested an automobile drive several times.

"I got a fast car," he says. "I can drive right good. In fact, I can drive with one hand as well as I can with two, and then I drive so fast that the motor needs to rest dead still about every hundred miles. Oh, say, speaking of cars, when are we going to take that drive?"

"Well," she says, "I guess we're going to take that drive tonight. But I want you to understand a couple of things before we start. There'll be no one-handed driving, and there won't be any rests for the motor. This here is a non-stop hop. I got to be back home by 11, and I don't do no necking. We don't take any stimulants along, and we don't stop at any dancing joints. You understand?"

"Pardon me, Miss," says John, "but there's a misunderstanding about this whole affair."

"Well, if there is, it's you that misunderstands. That's the kind of a drive it's going to be."

"I don't like to contradict you, lady," he says, "but you got me wrong. There ain't going to be no drive."

Crash!

A SMALL BOY was playing with an iron hoop in the street, when it bounced through the railings and broke a window. The lady of the house waited angrily for the appearance of the hoop's owner. He arrived.

"Please, I've broken your window," he said, "and father's come to mend it."

Sure enough, the boy was followed by a man, who set to work, while the boy ran off. The window finished, the man said:

"That'll be three shillings, mum."

"Three shillings!" gasped the woman. "But your son broke it. The little fellow with the hoop. You're his father, aren't you?"

"Never seen him before," he said. "He came round to my place and said his mother wanted her window mended. You're his mother, aren't you?"

The woman could only shake her head; words failed her.

Henry George

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Every young person should take the time to read carefully and to study Henry George's "Progress and Poverty."

Tolstoy said: "People do not argue with the teaching of Henry George. They simply do not know it. Those who become acquainted with it cannot but agree. The teaching of George is irresistibly convincing in its simplicity and clearness."

Anything that is thus whole-heartedly recommended by such a man as Tolstoy at least deserves our passing notice.

Many learned professors scout with scorn any suggestion coming from Henry George. They consider him as a faddist and a fanatical enthusiast.

It is certain, however, that there is something wrong with our present system of taxation. It does not bear equally upon the whole population and, in many instances, it is oppressive and unjust. Those who are doing the most to promote the welfare of the country are most thoroughly fined for their activities.

Do not take what other people around you say. Think for yourself. Read Henry George. I do not hesitate to say that it is the most instructive book on political economics that I have ever read.

Henry George's books have had a circulation of more than 6,000,000 in English alone, and have been translated into Chinese, Japanese, Russian, Finnish, Danish, Swedish, French, German, Spanish, Dutch, Hungarian and Italian.

We cannot resist the conviction that there must be something to writings that have been so thoroughly appreciated by the people of the world.

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, said: "I have reread this address and came away with the conviction that Henry George should be studied in all our colleges as the great economist. I know no other master of American prose, with the solitary exception of Woodrow Wilson, whose elevation of thought and dignity of language are so overwhelming."

Elbert Hubbard wrote: "The logic of Henry George's Progress and Poverty and its literary style have been so insistent that it is now studied closely by economists of note in every country on the globe. Its argument has never been answered."

STARS AND STRIPES

"My Blue-Eyed Blues" isn't a song—it's a disease.

A Chicago singer has been evicted because he couldn't raise a "key-note."

One Iowa farmer has been a prohibitionist so long he thinks "hard licker" is a man who beats his wife.

Hitting it up along the Gay White Way
Makes many of us what we be to-day.

It isn't the dirt-farmer who is spilling the political "dirt." He's only tilling it.

No wonder the chorus girl is saving her money. That's the only way she can "make-up" for a rainy day.

LESSON IN PATRIOTISM—How many of you know that if it wasn't for the Declaration of Independence there wouldn't be any Fourth of July? If it hadn't been for John Hancock we would now be a calendarless nation.
